Second-Hand Knowledge Patrick Wilson, 1983-08-24 The author uses social epistemology to develop the cognitive authority theory The fundamental concept of cognitive authority is that people construct knowledge in two different ways based on their first hand experience or on what they have learned second hand from others What people learn first hand depends on the stock of ideas they bring to the interpretation and understanding of their encounters with the world People primarily depend on others for ideas as well as for information outside the range of direct experience Much of what they think of the world is what they have gained second hand All that people know of the world beyond the narrow range of their own lives is what others have told them However people do not count all hearsay as equally reliable only those who are deemed to know what they are talking about become cognitive authorities

Thomas H. Davenport, 1997-06-26 According to virtually every business writer we are in the midst of a new information age one that will revolutionize how workers work how companies compete perhaps even how thinkers think And it is certainly true that Information Technology has become a giant industry In America more than 50% of all capital spending goes into IT accounting for more than a third of the growth of the entire American economy in the last four years Over the last decade IT spending in the U S is estimated at 3 trillion dollars And yet by almost all accounts IT hasn't worked all that well Why is it that so many of the companies that have invested in these costly new technologies never saw the returns they had hoped for And why do workers even CEOs find it so hard to adjust to new IT systems In Information Ecology Thomas Davenport proposes a revolutionary new way to look at information management one that takes into account the total information environment within an organization Arguing that the information that comes from computer systems may be considerably less valuable to managers than information that flows in from a variety of other sources the author describes an approach that encompasses the company's entire information environment the management of which he calls information ecology Only when organizations are able to combine and integrate these diverse sources of information and to take them to a higher level where information becomes knowledge will they realize the full power of their information ecology Thus the author puts people not technology at the center of the information world Information and knowledge are human creations he points out and we will never excel at managing them until we give people a primary role Citing examples drawn from his own extensive research and consulting including such major firms as AT&T explores the infighting jealousy over resources and political battles that can frustrate information sharing underscores the importance of looking at how people really use information how they search for it modify it share it hoard it and even ignore it and the kinds of information they want describes the ideal information staff who not only store and retrieve information but also prune provide context enhance style and choose the right presentation medium in an age of work overload vital information must be presented compellingly so the appropriate people recognize and use it examines how information management should be done on a day to day basis and presents several alternatives to the machine engineering approach to structuring and modeling information Davenport makes explicit what many managers already know in their gut that useful information flow depends on people not equipment In Information Ecology he paves the way for all managers to build a more competitive creative practical information environment for their

How biodiversity classification with its ranking of species has social and political implications as well as implications for the field of information studies The idea that species live in nature as pure and clear cut named individuals is a fiction as scientists well know According to Robert D Montoya classifications are powerful mechanisms and we must better attend to the machinations of power inherent in them as well as to how the effects of this power proliferate beyond the boundaries of their original intent We must acknowledge the many ways our classifications are implicated in environmental ecological and social justice work and information specialists must play a role in updating our notions of what it means to classify In Power of Position Montoya shows how classifications are systems that relate one entity with other entities requiring those who construct a system to value an entity s relative importance by way of its position within a system of other entities These practices says Montoya are important ways of constituting and exerting power Classification also has very real world consequences An animal classified as protected and endangered for example is protected by law Montoya also discusses the Catalogue of Life a new kind of composite classification that reconciles many local traditional taxonomies forming a unified taxonomic backbone structure for organizing biological data Finally he shows how the theories of information studies are applicable to realms far beyond those of biological classification      American Reference Books Annual Bohdan S.
