The Second World War, 1939-45 Maj.-Gen J. F. C. Fuller, 2018-04-03 British General J F C Fuller is one of the greatest military thinkers of this century and has been called the Clausewitz of our time This book is Fuller s direct and clear eyed account of the most terrible war of the modern era When first published in 1948 it received notices such as these The strategic and tactical phases of the war are brilliantly expounded on that score the book stands as probably the best comprehensive work on the war to appear so far The New Yorker The narrative valuable as it is is not the most important part of General Fuller s book What really matters is the author s comments on the events he describes and these provide us with a clear statement of what he thinks not only about particular operations but about the conduct of the war as a whole The result is a hard hitting politico military pamphlet in which none of the punches are pulled The Spectator Fuller knows how to handle a narrative full of incident he is thoroughly at home in a subject in which he has kept himself up to date and he is one of the very rare original students of warfare whom this country has produced Times Literary Supplement Fuller s biographer Bryan Holden Reid has described The Second World War as an analysis of the breakdown as Fuller saw it of the vital relationship between grand strategy and grand tactics the end and the means Too often books on the Second World War detail the movements of formations about the battlefield and give space to strategical commentary without assessing the manner in which the war was actually fought On the tactical level The Second World War can still be read with profit Expertly combining detailed military history and analysis with Clausewitzian insights based on his own theories of warfare Fuller produced a modern military masterpiece in The Second World War

The Second World War, 1939-45 J. F. C. Fuller, 1993-03-22 Fuller s biographer Bryan Holden Reid has described The Second World War as an analysis of the breakdown as Fuller saw it of the vital relationship between grand strategy and grand tactics the end and the means Too often books on the Second world War detail the movements of formations about the battlefield and give space to strategical commentary without assessing the manner in which the war was actually fought On the tactical level The Second World War can still be read with profit Fuller himself characterized the book however as in part a least a psychological study of the folly of man Expertly combining detailed military history and analysis with Clausewitzian insights based on his own theories of warfare Fuller produced a modern military masterpiece in The Second World War

World War II Battles Reconsidered Mark Thompson, 2025-04-03 Written by a former Harvard professor of decision science and game theory this book presents original insights on the strategies and tactics undertaken in four major battles of the Second World War That the fighting at Gazala in Libya in the late spring of 1942 constituted what has been called probably the most spectacular series of victories ever gained over a British army was in part due to its having violated the game theoretic Zero Sum Maxim of Napoleon Do not do what your enemy wishes you to The sensational British reversal of that disaster later that year at El Alamein in Egypt derived largely from heeding the millennia old military priority of command unity which has been analyzed and re endorsed by modern decision science This discipline has also judged the somewhat disappointing victory of the Allies at Falaise in France in August of 1944 to have resulted from excessive risk aversion possibly induced by three different types of fatigue One month later the Allied setback at Arnhem in the Netherlands called into question from the perspective of game theory the value of battlefield surprise These decisions approached from an expert perspective on game theory and presented with high quality maps are presented in this pioneering application of decision science to the battles of World War II
