

5 Stages of SECOND LANGUAGE ACQUISITION

BilingualKidspot.com

1

SILENT OR RECEPTIVE PHASE

In this first stage, second language learners dedicate time to learning vocabulary of the new language. They may also practice saying new terms.

2

EARLY PRODUCTION

This second phase involves the second language user beginning to "collect" new words. During this time they may also start to say some terms and may even begin forming short phrases of early word combinations.

3

SPEECH EMERGENCE OR PRODUCTION

By the time second language learners enter into this third stage, they have collected several thousand words. This is an exciting phase as they begin to communicate by combining these learned words into short phrases and sentences - their second language is truly becoming "connected".

4

INTERMEDIATE FLUENCY

The fourth level is said to occur when speakers begin communicating in complex sentences (that is, sentences will include conjunctions to sequence and connect related clauses).

This is a critical stage for allowing even more connected language and true conversations to emerge. Second language learners may also begin to think in their second language at this time, again reflecting the significant progress that has been made.

5

CONTINUED LANGUAGE DEVELOPMENT OR FLUENCY

This stage may last for an extended time. Here, second language learners will continue to develop their new language and to achieve accuracy with increasing complexity and with social pragmatics.
