

Lawrence Ferlinghetti

The Secret Meaning of Things

The Secret Meaning of Things is Lawrence Ferlinghetti's fourth book of poems, and it has all the elements of his earlier poetry: lyrical intensity, wit, social concern, satirical bite, and above all a classical claritas. But it goes much further: there is a deepening of vision and a darker understanding of "our clay condition."

The Secret Meaning of Things brings together six long poems with a certain continuity and progression of vision. The first five poems form a related sequence in which the poet sees "all too clearly." In "Assassination Raga" the "glass" through which the poet sees darkly is the TV tube, and it was first read on the night of Robert Kennedy's funeral at a mammoth poetry reading in Nourse Auditorium, San Francisco. "Bickford's Buddha" is a meditation on being afflicted with what the poet calls "observation fever"—the ultimate vision being that of the "all-seeing" Buddha. "All too Clearly" finds a surreal meaning of things in flight. "Through the Looking Glass" is also an in-flight poem, beginning with an actual flight aboard a commercial airliner and progressing through LSD vision to a final flash of how through everything "Shiva advances with a broken arm." "After the Cries of the Birds" is a logical opening-out of that vision into a wide-angle prophecy of the future of the world. "Moscow in the Wilderness, Segovia in the Snow" is a separate long poem resulting from Ferlinghetti's trip across Russia and Siberia in the Winter of 1967.
