The nouveau roman and Writing in Britain After Modernism Adam Guy, 2019-12-05 The nouveau roman and Writing in Britain After Modernism recovers a neglected literary history In the late 1950s news began to arrive in Britain of a group of French writers who were remaking the form of the novel In the work of Michel Butor Marguerite Duras Robert Pinget Alain Robbe Grillet Nathalie Sarraute and Claude Simon the hallmarks of novelistic writing discernible characters psychological depth linear chronology were discarded in favour of other aesthetic horizons Transposed to Britain's highly polarized literary culture the nouveau roman became a focal point for debates about the novel For some the nouveau roman represented an aberration and a pernicious turn against the humanistic values that the novel embodied For others it provided a route out of the stultifying conventionality and conformism that had taken root in British letters On both sides one question persisted given the innovations of interwar modernism to what extent was the nouveau roman actually new This book begins by drawing on publishers archives and hitherto undocumented sources from a wide range of periodicals to show how the nouveau roman was mediated to the British public Of central importance here is the publisher Calder Boyars and its belief that the nouveau roman could be enjoyed by a mass public The book then moves onto literary responses in Britain to the nouveau roman focusing on questions of translation realism the end of empire and the writing of the project From the translations of Maria Jolas through to the hostile responses of the circle around C P Snow and onto the literary debts expressed in novels by Brian W Aldiss Christine Brooke Rose Eva Figes B S Johnson Alan Sheridan Muriel Spark and Denis Williams the nouveau roman is shown to be a central concern in the postwar British literary field Marguerite Duras Revisited Marilyn R. Schuster, 1993 French writer Duras is best known for her novel The Lover This study of Duras's fiction and films sets five decades of her work in the context of her life and culture tracing the evolution of narrative strategies and themes and proposing a feminist reading of her work Annotation copyright Book A Sailor's Sweetheart William Clark Russell, 1897 A Sailor's Life Under Four Sovereigns (Complete) Sir Henry Keppel, 2013-03-13 The master tore open his waistcoat to ascertain where he was shot and then seized his cane for some minutes I dodged under the table and over the stools but caught it at last I was unable to sit and so went to bed My father had in his possession a letter from the Rev James Wood stating that I had fired a gun at him and that Mr Thomas had thrown a slate at his head divested of its frame The following half as the warm weather approached I succeeded in finding where the master kept his hair powder and with it mixed some finely pounded sugar On coming into school the flies soon found him and as he got warm his head became black instead of white This little game exceeded my expectations as irritated beyond endurance he dismissed us from school Among our playfellows was a Norfolk neighbour Edward Gurdon who sang well and tried to teach me Our sister Sophia who married Sir James Macdonald lived not far from Needham They drove over to take us to the launch of a ship at Aldborough On the return journey I in the gig driven by the coachman following the phaeton ran foul of a fish cart and broke the shaft I was pitched on to the back of the horse slipped down the trace and found my way to the phaeton The coachman had been taking his tea too strong At the back of the schoolhouse was a gable end up which a pear tree had long before been trained The trunk stood some six feet from the wall a pathway which led to the stables ran parallel on the outer side of which were pointed rails On top of these thin planks placed edgeways up which jasmine was trained One afternoon a ball with which we had been playing lodged in the upper part of the gable end I succeeded in reaching the ball when the branch gave way and I descended with it in one hand and the ball in the other the only things that partially checked my fall were the planks I came down impaled on the spiked rails A messenger was despatched to Quidenham but there were plenty of us nobody came We looked forward to our Christmas holidays My father kept a pack of beagles much to our delight as well as that of our neighbours the Surtees and Partridges both large families and sporting who with many others made our meets very cheery Hares there were in plenty We boys had clever ponies Mine Pio Mingo was peculiar looking white with black spots bushy mane and tail showed a good deal of the white of her eye The like of her might have been found at Astley s Both ponies were undeniably clever at finding their way across ditches and through fences and generally much nearer the hounds than pleased old Capes the huntsman Most of the hounds while running preferred the furrows to the open plough as did Mingo much to the grief of poor little Dancer Rattler and others But Mingo s great dislike was a hat which my elder brothers knew only too well One Friday morning after a continued frost horses and hounds were brought out for an airing and paraded in front of the house Fancying that I knew the whereabouts of my brothers I mounted Mingo in the stable and was sneaking along so as to get near the protection of led horses At that moment through a villa garden gate appeared my Waterloo brother He took off his hat as if to give Mingo a feed of corn I gripped both mane and crupper but the rattle of the whip inside the hat was too much Instead of a somersault in the air my left foot caught in the stirrup
