He is the author of Nursing Moving Forward 2020 which describes the work of nurse regulators across the United States and worldwide.

The Future of Nursing Institute of Medicine, Committee on the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Initiative on the Future of Nursing, at the Institute of Medicine, 2011-02-08. The Future of Nursing explores how nurses' roles, responsibilities, and education should change significantly to meet the increased demand for care that will be created by health care reform and to advance improvements in America's increasingly complex health system. At more than 3 million in number, nurses make up the single largest segment of the health care workforce. They also spend the greatest amount of time in delivering patient care as a profession. Nurses therefore have valuable insights and unique abilities to contribute as partners with other health care professionals in improving the quality and safety of care as envisioned in the Affordable Care Act (ACA) enacted this year. Nurses should be fully engaged with other health professionals and assume leadership roles in redesigning care in the United States. To ensure its members are well prepared, the profession should institute residency training for nurses, increase the percentage of nurses who attain a bachelor's degree to 80 percent by 2020, and double the number who pursue doctorates. Furthermore, regulatory and institutional obstacles, including limits on nurses' scope of practice, should be removed so that the health system can reap the full benefit of nurses' training, skills, and knowledge in patient care. In this book, the Institute of Medicine makes recommendations for an action-oriented blueprint for the future of nursing.

Global Health Systems Margie Lovett-Scott, Faith Prather, 2014. Global Health Systems: Comparing Strategies for Delivering Health Services is a comprehensive overview of healthcare access and delivery in 11 developing and industrialized countries. Transnational Management and Globalised Workers Tricia Cleland Silva, 2018-07-16. There are 60 million health care workers globally, and most of this workforce consists of nurses as they are key providers of primary health care. Historically, the global nurse occupation has been predominately female and segregated along gendered, racialised, and classed hierarchies. In the last decade, new actors have emerged in the management of health care human resources, specifically from the corporate sector, which has created new interaction networks and organisational practices. This book urgently calls for the reconceptualisation in the theoretical framing of the globalised nurse occupation.

from International Human Resource Management IHRM to Transnational Human Resource Management THRM Specifically the book draws on critical human resource management literature and transnational feminist theories to frame the strategies and practices used to manage nurses across geographical sites of knowledge production and power which centralise on how and by whom nurses are managed In its current managerial form the author argues that the nurses are constructed and produced as resources to be packaged for clients in public and private organisations
