A Party for the Girls Herbert Ernest Bates,1988 The six long stories of A Party for the Girls present H E Bates at his finest A crack shot at understated tragedy Bates is perhaps at his best with comedy and character consider the opening line of the title story Miss Tompkins who was seventy six bright pink looking in a bath salts sort of way and full of an alert but dithering energy looked out the drawing room window for the twentieth time since breakfast and found herself growing increasingly excited Though virtually unknown here as Publishers Weekly put it in their review of Bates's A Month by the Lake Other Stories 1987 his nearly perfect stories should set his readers clamoring for more He is as adept at the seductive rise and fall of his narrative voice as he is cunning with naturalistic dialogue Comparisons to Joyce Chekhov and Mansfield are inevitable

MODERN HEROINES: Selected Short Stories

Lucy Maud Montgomery,2023-02-07 Modern Heroines is a selection of short stories written between 1900 and 1915 by the celebrated Canadian author Lucy Maud Montgomery 1874 1942 well known for the saga of novels starring the unforgettable Anne of Green Gables The 17 short stories that make up this anthology were selected from hundreds of stories by Montgomery that were published in magazines of the time and then left behind The compilation includes stories of heroines that largely respond to the ideals of the new woman of the early 20th century In Montgomery's entertaining and subtle fashion these delightful stories bring us closer to what it was like to be a woman more than a hundred years ago We feel the expectations of marriageable young women but also the uncertainties of those who not having a husband before thirty were considered old spinsters The concerns of women who wished to occupy a different role in life from that of wife and mother are also reflected The difficulty of those who had no fortune and were compelled to ensure their livelihood is evident as well as the obligation of always having to comply with men's desires and needs or with what was imposed by a society that pigeonholed women and did not offer them options outside the domestic sphere Most of the modern heroines depicted in this book reflect the feelings of many women who at the dawn of the twentieth century were no longer willing to conform and obey women who demanded to be masters of their own lives
