Passing Brave:

The Death of Shakespeare - Part One Jon Benson, 2015-09-01 William Shakespeare from Stratford upon Avon appeared in London in 1590 at the age of 26 and is believed by many to have begun writing the greatest plays the world has ever seen. There is no record of his education if he had any. His parents wife and children may have been illiterate. He left no books. No one reported in any diary or letter that they had met him or talked to him or even talked about him. He left six signatures all different. Three were on his last will and testament which makes no mention of any plays, poems or books. Two were on deeds to real property. The last was on an affidavit he gave in a court case. The records show a businessman who acquired considerable property during his lifetime, hoarded grain during a famine and engaged in a number of lawsuits, one over as little as five pounds. He was connected with the theatre and may have been an actor, but there is nothing that independently proves he was the author of the plays attributed to him. Mark Twain, Sigmund Freud, Orson Welles, Sir Lawrence Olivier, Sir Derek Jacobi, Walt Whitman and many others, including a number of United States Supreme Court justices, have all concluded that William did not write the plays. But if he didn't, who did? And if someone else was the greatest author who ever lived, why was Shakespeare given the credit? This is how it happened and why Shakespeare paid with his life for his part in to use the words of Henry James, the biggest and most successful fraud ever practiced on a patient world. BC Provincial Police

Alexander the Great Philip Freeman, 2011-10-18 Alexander the Great, Alexander III of Macedon, was one of history's great generals, a man studied by Caesar and Napoleon among hundreds of others. He was born to the king of Macedon and educated by Aristotle, whose inquiring mind Alexander appreciated. After his father Philip II was assassinated, the 19-year-old Alexander succeeded to the throne and swiftly consolidated power. Over the next 13 years until his death at age 32, Alexander created one of the great empires of history, covering an area as far south as Egypt and as far east as Afghanistan and India. Most of the world that he conquered had been the province of the Persian Empire. Upon his death, his empire was broken up and ruled by his generals; the best known were the Ptolemies, who ruled Egypt until Cleopatra was defeated by Caesar. Alexandrias, Egypt and many other Alexandrias throughout that part of the world were named in his honour. Alexander's greatest influence was not his leadership; his empire was eventually conquered by Rome, but spreading Greek culture throughout the lands east of the Mediterranean. He is the reason that gold coins from Afghanistan depicted Greek gods and heroes until as recently as several centuries ago. It is because of Alexander that St Paul, a Jew who lived in modern-day Syria before travelling to modern-day Israel, spoke Greek, and it is because of Alexander that the earliest Christian documents, including the scriptures, were written in Greek. The Academy and Literature, 1911
