Freudian Passions Jan Campbell, 2018-05-08 Freud's thinking about the unconscious has always been seen to be more about representations than affects When it came to the passions of the transference and the demands of his hysterical patients Freud was always more interested wanted to move the focus away from the transference and onto dreams Hidden wishes more than manifest ones were what captured his imagination and style This book returns to the repressed theory of passions in Freud's own thinking arguing that the repression fixation and rhythmic movement of affects make up the roots and branches of psychoanalytic thinking We can think of Freud's unconscious affects as a tree with the most passionate and primitive affects that make up the core of our psychic life moving and branching out into more elaborated emotions and representations So what moves this tree the house of our first passions How we move the tree of our affects or leave it is integral to Freud's understanding of sexuality and the Oedipal Complex processes were construed by Coleridge in his dream readings and by his contemporaries in a range of poetic and medical works This historical exploration of dreams and dreaming allows Ford to explore previously neglected contemporary debates on the medical imagination By avoiding purely biographical or psychoanalytic approaches she reveals instead a rich historical context for the ways in which the most mysterious workings of the Romantic imagination were explored and understood
