Intellectual Property in Asia Paul Goldstein, Joseph Straus, 2009-01-07 Introduction Intellectual property rights foster innovation But if as it surely does intellectual property means not just intellectual property rules the law of patents copyrights trademarks designs trade secrets and unfair competition but also intellectual property institutions the courts police regulatory agencies and collecting soc ties that administer these rules what are the respective roles of intellectual property rules and institutions in fostering creativity And to what extent do forces outside intellectual property rules and institutions economics culture politics history also contribute to innovation Is it possible that these other factors so overwhelm the impact of intellectual property regimes that it is futile to expect adjustments in intellectual property rules and institutions to alter patterns of inno tion and ultimately economic development It was to address these questions in the most dynamic region of the world today Asia that we invited leading country experts to contribute studies that not only summarize the current condition of intellectual property regimes in countries ranging in economic size from Cambodia to Japan and in population from Laos to China but that also describe the historical sources of these laws and institutions the realities of intellectual property enforcement in the marketplace and the political economic educational and scientific infrastructures that sustain and direct inve ment in innovative activity A The Patent Crisis and How the Courts Can Solve It Dan L. Burk, Mark A. Lemley, 2009-08-01 Patent law is crucial to encourage technological innovation But as the patent system currently stands diverse industries from pharmaceuticals to software to semiconductors are all governed by the same rules even though they innovate very differently The result is a crisis in the patent system where patents calibrated to the needs of prescription drugs wreak havoc on information technologies and vice versa According to Dan L Burk and Mark A Lemley in The Patent Crisis and How the Courts Can Solve It courts should use the tools the patent system already gives them to treat patents in different industries differently Industry tailoring is the only way to provide an appropriate level of incentive for each industry Burk and Lemley illustrate the barriers to innovation created by the catch all standards in the current system Legal tools already present in the patent statute they contend offer a solution courts can tailor patent law through interpretations and applications to suit the needs of various types of businesses The Patent Crisis and How the Courts Can Solve It will be essential reading for those seeking to understand the nexus of economics business and law in the twenty first century Indian Affairs. EC Competition Law Reform Barry E. Hawk, 2002-10-01 1 Hardcover Volume This volume includes selected chapters from the annual proceedings of the Fordham Corporate Law Institute The general subject is the reform of EC competition law enforcement This has been the subject of many Fordham conferences over the years Indeed EC Commission officials have stated that the modern reform proposals presently being considered had their roots at Fordham The present volume includes seminal articles and critiques of the EC competition law regime as well as very recent discussions of the Commission's proposal for reform. Because much of the literature on EC competition law reform is scattered, the present volume should be useful in including in one place a broad selection of articles and roundtable discussions. The chapters cover not only institutional and jurisdictional issues like decentralization and sharing of powers between the Commission and the EC member states but also substantive issues like the scope of Article 81 and the rules of reason. These and other issues are examined from both an analytical and historical perspective which greatly facilitates understanding of the future implications of the reform measures presently being debated. In sum, the chapters are not merely of historical interest; problems and questions of ongoing importance are discussed. Intellectual Property,

Pharmaceuticals and Public Health Kenneth C. Shadlen, S. Guennif, 2011-01-01. This impressive collection offers fascinating new perspectives on the impact of pharmaceutical patents on access to medicines in developing countries. The volume's editors have put together an important book that sets out clearly the challenges to public health in a wide range of national contexts. The book will be a valuable text for all scholars and decision makers interested in the global politics of intellectual property rights and public health. Duncan Matthews, Queen Mary University of London, UK. This up-to-date book examines pharmaceutical development, access to medicines, and the protection of public health in the context of two fundamental changes that the global political economy has undergone since the 1970s: the globalization of trade and production and the increased harmonization of national regulations on intellectual property rights. With authors from eleven different countries presenting case studies of national experiences in Africa, Asia, and the Americas, the book analyzes national strategies to promote pharmaceutical innovation while at the same time assuring widespread access to medicines through generic pharmaceutical production and generic pharmaceutical importation. The expert chapters focus on patents as well as an array of regulatory instruments including pricing and drug registration policies. Presenting in-depth analysis and original empirical research, this book will strongly appeal to academics and students of intellectual property, international health, international political economy, international development, and law. Clearinghouse Review, 2003.
