Merchant Capital And The Roots Of State Power In Senegal 1930 1985:

Merchant Capital and the Roots of State Power in Senegal Catherine Boone, 2006-11-02 In most post colonial regimes in sub Saharan Africa state power has been used to structure economic production in ways that have tended to produce economic stagnation rather than growth In this book Catherine Boone examines the ways in which the exercise of state power has inhibited economic growth focusing on the case of Senegal She traces changes in the political economy of Senegal from the heyday of colonial merchant capital in the 1930s to the decay of the neo colonial merchant capital in the 1980s and reveals that old trading monopolies commercial hierarchies and patterns of wealth accumulation were preserved at the cost of reforms that would have stimulated economic growth Boone uses this case to develop an argument against analyses of political economic development that identify state institutions and ideologies as independent forces driving the process of economic transformation State power she argues is rooted in the material and social bases of ruling alliances

Merchant Capital and the Roots of State Power in Senegal 1930-1985, 1992 Diverse Development Paths and Structural Transformation in the Escape from Poverty Martin Andersson, Tobias Axelsson, 2016-04-21 This volume analyzes the experiences of developing countries in Asia Latin America and Sub Saharan Africa and examines how they might catch up Based on growth performance across the developing world over the last five decades it offers a thorough account of the possibilities to engage in such processes in an increasingly globalized world Together the chapters highlight the diversity and variation of development pathways and provide valuable lessons and implications for how to approach this difficult question The book shows the importance of acknowledging that the process of development is dynamic and that the possibilities for catch up are situation dependent At the same time it makes clear that without structural change and in particular agricultural transformation sustained catch up is unlikely to happen The volume demonstrates how analysis of current growth processes in developing countries can be enriched by paying closer attention to the multifaceted nature of both economic backwardness and successful pathways to escape it

Transactional Culture in Colonial Dakar, 1902-44 Rachel M. Petrocelli, 2024 Examines Dakar s transformation from a small colonial capital to a dynamic city highlighting how its resourceful residents challenged French control by forging adaptive economic relationships During a transformative era in the first half of the twentieth century Dakar former capital of French West Africa and present day capital of Senegal evolved from a small colonial capital meant to serve the French administration to a dynamic city shaped not solely by colonial planners but also by its resourceful inhabitants In this important book historian Rachel Petrocelli introduces the concept of transactional culture a set of norms and practices forged by Dakar s residents to navigate life under colonial rule A central element of that culture was transience a defining feature permeating various facets of life in Dakar from commerce and employment to housing and interactions with the state The book uncovers a central dynamic economic relationships in Dakar were continually molded by the ebb and flow of diverse individuals each pursuing their own objectives despite the relentless efforts of the French state to exert control Both Europeans and Africans embraced adaptability in Dakar over fixed residence while immigrant communities implanted themselves and became integral to the city's transactional culture In this examination based on court records and other sources Petrocelli shows that as the French colonial state sought to shape and control Dakar it enacted policies to intentionally limit city dwellers' resources Strategies like pawning possessions and taking out credit creatively devising housing and mobilizing identities and affiliations emerged as a result integrating Dakarois of every background These practices persisted long after French rule ended underscoring the enduring impact of Dakar's colonial history

Risk Inequality and Welfare States Philipp Rehm, 2016-05-31 The transformation of night watchman states into welfare states is one of the most notable societal developments in recent history In 1880 not a single country had a nationally compulsory social policy program A few decades later every single one of today's rich democracies had adopted programs covering all or almost all of the main risks people face old age sickness accident and unemployment These programs rapidly expanded in terms of range reach and resources Today all rich democracies cover all main risks for a vast majority of citizens with binding public or mandatory private programs Three aspects of this remarkable transformation are particularly fascinating the trend the transformation to insurance states happened in all rich democracies differences across countries the generosity of social policy varies greatly across countries and the dynamics of the process This book offers a theory that not only explains this remarkable transition but also explains cross national differences and the role of crises for social policy development

Rice Francesca Bray, Peter A. Coclanis, Edda L. Fields-Black, Dagmar Schäfer, 2015-02-19 Rice is a first step toward a history of rice and its place in capitalism from global and comparative perspectives

Warlords and Coalition Politics in Post-Soviet States Jesse Driscoll, 2015-07-02 This book presents an account of war settlement in Georgia and Tajikistan as local actors maneuvered in the shadow of a Russian led military intervention Combining ethnography and game theory and quantitative and qualitative methods this book presents a revisionist account of the post Soviet wars and their settlement

Land Politics Lauren Honig, 2022-08-25 This book provides new insight into the high stakes struggle to control land in the Global South through the lens of land titling in Zambia and Senegal Based on extensive fieldwork it shows how chiefs and communities challenge the state in an era of increasing scarcity and booming global land markets

African Economies and the Politics of Permanent Crisis, 1979-1999 Nicolas Van de Walle, 2001-09-24 This 2001 book explains why African countries have remained mired in a disastrous economic crisis since the late 1970s It shows that dynamics internal to African state structures largely explain this failure to overcome economic difficulties rather than external pressures on these same structures as is often argued Far from being prevented from undertaking reforms by societal interest and pressure groups clientelism within the state elite ideological factors and low state capacity have resulted in some limited reform but much prevarication and manipulation of the reform process by governments which do not really believe that reform will be effective which often oppose reforms because they would undercut the patronage and rent seeking practices which undergird political authority and which lack the administrative and technical capacity to implement much reform Over time state decay has increased The Politics of Equity Finance in Emerging Markets Department of Political Science Case Western Reserve University Kathryn C. Lavelle Professor, 2004-09-24 Emerging market stock issuance relative to GDP rose in the late twentieth century to levels that roughly matched that of advanced industrial markets Nonetheless the connection between owning shares of emerging market stock and the ability to influence the management of these firms remains fundamentally different from the analogous institutional connection that has evolved in industrial markets The reasons for the differences in emerging markets are both historical and political in nature That is local equity markets have had the objective of providing for some degree of local ownership and control of large economic entities since the late nineteenth century However local markets have operated under different global political structures since that time ranging from imperialism to world wars to sovereign developmental states to neo liberal states Shares issued under these different structures have been reconfigured over time resulting in a lack of convergence along either the Anglo American or Continental models of corporate governance The author uses a political science paradigm to explain the growth of emerging equity markets She departs from conventional economic explanations and examines politics at the micro level of large issues of emerging market stock The second half of the book presents case studies dealing with emerging market countries in Latin America Asia Russia and Eastern Europe Africa and the Middle East The case studies connect the regional state and firm levels to detail the multiple ownership and control arrangements and to dispel the notion that mere quantitative growth of these markets will lead to a convergence in financial institutional structures along the lines of the industrial core of the world economy
