Missile Envy Helen Caldicott, 1985

Nuclear Arms Race Sebastian Farnham, AI, 2025-03-04

Nuclear Arms Race explores the complex history of nuclear weapons from their creation to their lasting impact on global politics It argues that the nuclear arms race was more than just a military buildup it was a product of political ideologies scientific breakthroughs and human error shaping international relations even today The book uniquely examines the psychological factors influencing decision making during high tension periods offering a human centered perspective The book progresses by first introducing the science behind nuclear weapons and the ethical dilemmas faced by their creators It then analyzes the Cold War arms race including events like the Cuban Missile Crisis and the SALT talks Finally it addresses post Cold War challenges like nuclear proliferation and terrorism drawing on declassified documents archival materials and interviews with key figures This approach provides a comprehensive understanding of nuclear weapons and their impact on the world

The Dynamics of the Arms Race David Carlton, Carlo Schaerf, 2020-12-01 The nuclear arms race had dominated international politics for the two decades prior to publication Originally published in 1975 this symposium examines the dynamics of change within the arms race and the attempts at controlling and limiting it At the time the nuclear arms race was strongly technologically determined as Herbert York demonstrates in discussing the impact of MIRV Such progress as has been made in nuclear disarmament has been far outdistanced by the technological developments so that as Jack Ruina argues SALT is only important when seen as part of a process of negotiating arms limitations The most significant result of this technological advance has been the emergence of a qualitatively new system of international politics which Hans Morgenthau analyses This system is essentially bipolar in nuclear terms and the history of the disarmament negotiations as reviewed by William Epstein is an exercise in freezing this structure The negotiations themselves particularly SALT and the prospects for further progress are discussed extensively by Thomas Schelling Kosta Tsipis George Rathjens and others The book also surveys developments in chemical and biological warfare and includes an important paper on chemical warfare agents by the Soviet chemist O A Ruetov The final section looks at recent developments in the theory of conflict and its applications in the Middle East South Africa and a number of developing countries

The Soviet Union, the West, and the Nuclear Arms Race Robbin Frederick Laird, 1986 Arms in the '80s John Turner, Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, 2020-11-19 In the 1980s the world spent an enormous amount on preparations for war Year by year more and more resources went into the military sector More and more complex weapon systems were devised At the time of all research scientists and engineers in the world more than one in four was working for the military Throughout the 40 years since the end of World War II the technological arms race continued Then began moving faster The United States lead the way followed by the Soviet Union Between them they possessed some 50 000 nuclear warheads more than enough to destroy the world They planned to increase the number to make the weapons more accurate and to base them on new weapon platforms closer to the borders of the other side Some people preferred not to think about these things Many however were becoming increasingly concerned wondering about the future for themselves and for their children Originally published in 1985 this book was for those who wanted to know what was happening What new missiles were being built What was happening in outer space What are the facts about chemical weapons What progress was being made if any in Geneva Vienna and Stockholm where the powers were negotiating on these matters
