

Forest Fertilization in Southern Pine Plantations

By T.R. Fox, H.L. Allen, T.J. Albaugh, R. Rubilar, and C.A. Carlson

Forest fertilization is a widespread silvicultural practice in the southeastern U.S. About 1.2 million acres of pine plantations were fertilized with phosphorus (P) or nitrogen (N) plus P in 2004. The average growth response of loblolly pine plantations following mid-rotation fertilization with N+P is approximately 50 ft³/A/yr for 8 years. Internal rates of return in excess of 10% can be obtained after mid-rotation fertilization under current market conditions.

The southeastern U.S. produces more timber than any other region of the world from a forest base that now includes almost half of the world's forest plantations. There are currently 32 million acres of pine plantations in the southeastern states, predominantly comprised of loblolly pine (Pinus taeda L.) and to a lesser extent slash pine (Pinus elliotii Englem.). The growth rate in the pine plantations in the region currently averages around 5 green tons/A/yr, which is substantially lower than in many forest plantations in other parts of the world. Theoretical models, empirical field trials, and operational experience show that these growth rates are well below what is possible. With investment in appropriate intensive plantation silvicultural systems, growth rates exceeding 10 tons/A/yr are biologically possible and financially attractive for a broad range of site types. Forest fertilization should be included in silvicultural regimes that are designed to enhance plantation growth in the region.

Ecophysiology and Tree Nutrition

It is now generally accepted that much of the variation in wood production in forest plantations is caused by variation in light interception. Light interception is principally a function of the amount of leaf area in a stand. Studies with loblolly pine and slash pine have shown that leaf area, and consequently wood production, are below optimum levels in most of the Southeast (Figure 1). Low nutrient availability is a principal factor causing subop-

Increased growth of pine trees with fertilization (left), compared to trees without fertilization (right), is illustrated in these Alabama plots.

Training manual on forests and trees for food security and nutrition Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations , United Republic of Tanzania, 2020-04-01 Currently in Tanzania training institutions for professionals in cross cutting sectors such as forestry and agriculture do not adequately capture the role of forest and tree resources for food security and nutrition leading to dependency on one sector agriculture to cater for food and nutrition diversity This undervalues the fundamental role of forest ecosystem services for sustainable agriculture by regulating water flows stabilizing soils maintaining soil fertility regulating the climate and providing habitat for wild pollinators and predators of agricultural pests Provision of education on sustainable forests and trees for food security and nutrition at all levels seems to be the most conceivable entry point to ensure that adequate knowledge and skills are imparted to professionals The goals of this training manual are to enhance the recognition and significance of forestry to food security and nutrition through the sustainable management and use of forests and trees² enhance the food security and nutrition benefits from the forests and trees enhance and stimulate research and training capacity strengthen institutional frameworks by incorporating food security and nutrition objectives in forest management policies programmes and projects and develop value chains based on forest and tree resources for sustainable development in the country The overall objective is to create awareness and enable increased investment in the forestry sector for food security and nutrition in Tanzania This training manual is also meant to serve as a useful tool for sharing and exchanging knowledge and experiences across different regions within the country and beyond

Plant Roots and Their Environment B.L. McMichael,H. Persson,2012-12-02 Scientists within a wide field ranging from applied forestry and agriculture to physiology ecology and the environmental sciences are today more than ever involved in root and mycorrhizal research New problem oriented research fields have arisen such as the effects of fertilizers and pesticides forest management and regeneration etc At a time when root research is expanding into different areas it is much more difficult for the root scientist to penetrate all the new information appearing in literature The contributors of this volume are leading scientists from different fields of root research The ISRR symposium in Uppsala clearly demonstrated that there are new techniques in progress in particular with regards to video recording of plant root systems and digital image processing The main objectives of the symposium were i to provide a forum for communication between scientists from different disciplines working with root research problems ii to contribute to an expansion of root studies into new areas iii to use current estimates of root turnover for charting the upper and lower limit of below ground production and iv to spread knowledge of new findings and techniques of the importance of root research This book is aimed at serving as a vehicle for improving the coherence of root research for harmonizing methods and establishing overall objectives and gaps in the knowledge of rhizosphere dynamics

Paine,2007-05-24 Demand for timber and fibre continues to grow and is being met by increased reliance on plantation forestry Many of the plantations that are being grown around the globe are non native species that have characteristics of rapid growth and good commercial qualities In some cases the high rates of production are a result of the absence of native herbivore and diseases This limited pest status is threatened as pest species move around the globe At the same time there is concern about threats of these non native plantation species on native communities and the impact of changing climates on forest productivity This volume explores many of these issues for the first time Bibliography of Agriculture ,1976
