Nursing in Partnership with Patients and Carers Audrey Reed, 2011-05-12 Future healthcare services are changing to give patients more rights over their own healthcare The NMC requires that nurses work in partnership with those in their care This book provides a timely guide to enabling patient and carer participation in nursing care It challenges the reader to see the person in the patient and explores the nature of the nurse patient relationship It gives practical advice on how students can promote participation on placements and in practice The book also offers an insight into the realities of being a carer and discusses how quality of patient experiences can be assessed Patient Engagement Marie-Pascale

Pomey, Jean-Louis Denis, Vincent Dumez, 2019-10-10 Patient oriented approaches to healthcare management have been brought to the fore in recent years yet this book underlines how even further change is needed in order to fully mobilise the experiential knowledge of patients and ultimately improve our healthcare systems With contributions from scholars and patients across the globe this collection brings together a comprehensive overview of major achievements in patient engagement analysing political organizational and clinical contexts By understanding the concept of care partnership the authors explore how this patient revolution could transform improve and innovate the ways in which care services are organized and delivered Looking closely at the role of new technologies this timely book will undoubtedly be of use to patients managers and professionals within the healthcare industry as well as those researching health policy and organization Partnering with Patients to Reduce Medical Errors Patrice Spath, 2004 Nursing Partnership with

Patients, Parents and Families for Safety Through Simulation Courtney Caufield, 2018 Abstract Problem The importance of communication between nurses patients and their family members with respect to treating each other as partners in safety cannot be overstated It is imperative that families and patients feel empowered to speak up and report clinical errors at any time and be able to communicate effectively to prevent harm and encourage communication Context This is especially important in the acute care setting where patients may be in contact with multiple people and processes daily Attention to this safety partnership can be established through improvements in patient satisfaction scores which are usually collected from patients and their families after discharge as well as other measures such as the number of concerns reported and caregiver confidence Intervention This project aimed to translate existing evidence into practice to explore nurses ability to promote safety partnerships with patients and families Measures This was measured by responses given by pediatric nurses working on one pediatric unit A survey was administered before and after simulation training to evaluate the nurses comfort with these conversations In addition HCAHPS also known as Hospital CAHPS stands for Hospital Consumer Assessment of Healthcare Providers and Systems and is a standardized survey of hospital patients that captures patients unique perspectives on hospital care for providing the public with comparable information on hospital quality These are considered patient satisfaction scores and are reported post discharge The trend in HCAHPS scores were reviewed to monitor for efficacy of the patient's patient's and family's ability and comfort to speak up and report any errors and safety concerns. Lastly, the incident reporting system was used to track trend and compare reported events to near miss events by showing an increase in nurses identifying and reporting safety concerns before they occur. The simulation training was focused on communication, listening, and clarifying to facilitate a culture of safety between the nurses and the patient families. Listening carefully to the voice of the patient as part of the core care team is imperative for providing patient and family-centered care that is conducive to learning and promotes an atmosphere of quality and safety. In patient and family-centered care, patients and families define their family and determine how they will participate in care and decision making. A key goal is to promote the health and well-being of individuals and families and to maintain their control. Johnson B H and Abraham M R 2012

Conclusions This project produced both quantitative and qualitative results supporting this concept and the results demonstrated an improvement in HCAHPS scores reported by parents about their confidence in reporting mistakes or errors. The results of the post simulation training survey exhibited growth in the nurse's opinion about their abilities to have conversations with patients and families around safety and reporting mistakes. The total percentage is the number of parents or patients post discharge that reported that they were confident in reporting mistakes. In addition, other outcomes included staff participant confidence and comfort in reporting near misses or close calls in the units. This was demonstrated by an increase in nurse-reported confidence through a survey before and after the intervention. Additionally, quantitative data from the incident reporting system in the organization resulted in an increase in near miss and close call events and a decrease in reported actual events in the unit where the intervention took place. This information has continued to be reported monthly at shared governance committee meetings to ensure that staff members and the multidisciplinary team could see results and share comments as well as what was learned. Noteworthy outcomes from the project include an increase in HCAPS scores to the questions focused on reporting mistakes or near miss errors and/or events. One goal was to increase the confidence in identifying and speaking up about concerns or near miss events. The number of actual events or harm that had occurred should be lower than reports of potential events. After the intervention, the number of entries in the organization's error reporting system that identified near misses or close call events increased from a total reported of three percent to thirty seven percent (67 out of a total of 125 reports). This increase displays a recognition by the nursing staff to report potential harm and near misses, not only actual mistakes and speak up to prevent actual harm in future cases.

A Socio-cultural Perspective on Patient Safety Justin Waring, 2017-11-01 This edited volume of original chapters brings together researchers from around the world who are exploring the facets of health care organization and delivery that are sometimes marginal to mainstream patient safety theories and methodologies but offer important insights into the socio cultural and organizational context of patient safety By examining these critical insights or perspectives and drawing upon theories and methodologies often neglected by mainstream safety researchers this collection shows we can learn more about not only the barriers and drivers to implementing patient safety programmes but also about the more fundamental issues that shape notions of safety alternate strategies for enhancing safety and the wider implications of the safety agenda on the future of health care delivery In so doing A Socio cultural Perspective on Patient Safety challenges the taken for granted assumptions around fundamental philosophical and political issues upon which mainstream orthodoxy relies The book draws upon a range of theoretical and empirical approaches from across the social sciences to investigate and question the patient safety movement Each chapter takes as its focus and question a particular aspect of the patient safety reforms from its policy context and theoretical foundations to its practical application and manifestation in clinical practice whilst also considering the wider implications for the organization and delivery of health care services Accordingly the chapters each draw upon a distinct theoretical or methodological approach to critically explore specific dimensions of the patient safety agenda Taken as a whole the collection advances a strong coherent argument that is much needed to counter some of the uncritical assumptions that need to be described and analyzed if patient safety is indeed to be achieved

Compliance with Medications Richard Schulz, Christopher Cook, Louis Roller, Jack Fincham, Jenny Gowan, 2007-03-26

Improve your patient's health through a fresh view of their behaviors. Patients who use over the counter (OTC) and prescription medicine often do not take the drugs as intended, sometimes to the detriment to their health and well-being. These widespread problems cause health professionals to agonize over how to try to make sure patients comply with medication instructions. Patient Compliance with Medication: Issues and Opportunities tackles this tough issue by exploring in detail the range of noncompliance behavior, the negative impacts the behavior has on patients as well as society at large, and practical ways to influence people to take their medicine for optimum health. Respected pharmacist and author Jack Fincham and other noted experts provide insights, surprising data, and effective solutions to a challenge nearly all health professionals encounter. Patients often use drugs they get from a multitude of sources, making the capability of monitoring drug use difficult. Other problems can also interfere with a patient's health, such as a patient borrowing drugs from family or friends or even not taking them at all, simply because he or she are unable to pay for them. Patient Compliance with Medication: Issues and Opportunities goes beyond the standard explanations and mostly ineffective quick solutions usually offered for the complicated noncompliance issue. Leading authorities describe the range of reasons for a patient's behavior and provide practical strategies that strike at the root of the problem. Helpful tables, figures, and extensive references are also included. Topics in Patient Compliance with Medication: Issues and Opportunities include the prevalence of noncompliance, costs of noncompliance, drug therapies that lead to noncompliance, measuring compliance, models to evaluate patient compliance, evaluation methods, ethical considerations, health professionals' roles in compliance, disease state management, future considerations, and much more. Patient Compliance with Medication: Issues and Opportunities is insightful, crucial information for health professionals, educators, and students.
