

The illustration is a monochromatic, reddish-brown artwork. It depicts a scene from a Victorian-era story. In the foreground, a man in a dark suit is bent over a woman who is lying on a bed or sofa, appearing to be in a state of distress or unconsciousness. He is holding her hand. In the background, a woman in a long, dark dress stands near a doorway, looking on. The overall mood is somber and dramatic.

Passion And Pathology In Victorian Fiction Body Mind And Neurology:

Passion and Pathology in Victorian Fiction Jane Wood, 2001 Nervous illness and the study of how body and mind connected were of intense interest to Victorian medical writers and novelists alike This elegant study offers an integrated analysis of how medicine and literature figured the connection between the body and the mind Alongside detailed examinations of some of the era's most influential neurological and physiological theories Jane Wood offers fresh readings of fictions by Charlotte Brontë George MacDonald George Eliot Wilkie Collins Thomas Hardy and George Gissing The Art of Uncertainty Daniel Williams, 2024-03-07 Daniel Williams shows how in a profoundly numerical age Victorian novels imagined thought and action in the face of uncertainty Demons of the Body and Mind Ruth Bienstock Anolik, 2014-01-10 The Gothic mode typically preoccupied by questions of difference and otherness consistently imagines the Other as a source of grotesque horror The sixteen critical essays in this collection examine the ways in which those suffering from mental and physical ailments are refigured as Other and how they are imagined to be monstrous Together the essays highlight the Gothic inclination to represent all ailments as visibly monstrous even those such as mental illness which were invisible Paradoxically the Other also becomes a pitiful figure often evoking empathy This exploration of illness and disability represents a strong addition to Gothic studies The Victorian Novel Francis O'Gorman, 2008-04-15 This guide steers students through significant critical responses to the Victorian novel from the end of the nineteenth century to the present day Victorian Pain Rachel Ablow, 2020-06-09 The nineteenth century introduced developments in science and medicine that made the eradication of pain conceivable for the first time This new understanding of pain brought with it a complex set of moral and philosophical dilemmas If pain serves no obvious purpose how do we reconcile its existence with a well ordered universe Examining how writers of the day engaged with such questions Victorian Pain offers a compelling new literary and philosophical history of modern pain Rachel Ablow provides close readings of novelists Charlotte Brontë and Thomas Hardy and political and natural philosophers John Stuart Mill Harriet Martineau and Charles Darwin as well as a variety of medical scientific and popular writers of the Victorian age She explores how discussions of pain served as investigations into the status of persons and the nature and parameters of social life No longer conceivable as divine trial or punishment pain in the nineteenth century came to seem instead like a historical accident suggesting little or nothing about the individual who suffers A landmark study of Victorian literature and the history of pain Victorian Pain shows how these writers came to see pain as a social as well as a personal problem Rather than simply self evident to the sufferer and unknowable to anyone else pain was also understood to be produced between persons and even perhaps by the fictions they read The Routledge Research Companion to Nineteenth-Century British Literature and Science John Holmes, Sharon Ruston, 2017-05-18 Tracing the continuities and trends in the complex relationship between literature and science in the long nineteenth century this companion provides scholars with a comprehensive authoritative and up to date foundation for research in this field In intellectual material and social terms the transformation undergone by Western culture over the period was unprecedented. Many of these changes were grounded in the growth of science. Yet science was not a cultural monolith then any more than it is now and its development was shaped by competing world views. To cover the full range of literary engagements with science in the nineteenth century this companion consists of twenty seven chapters by experts in the field which explore crucial social and intellectual contexts for the interactions between literature and science how science affected different genres of writing and the importance of individual scientific disciplines and concepts within literary culture. Each chapter has its own extensive bibliography. The volume as a whole is rounded out with a synoptic introduction by the editors and an afterword by the eminent historian of nineteenth century science Bernard Lightman.

Neurology and Literature, 1860-1920 A. Stiles, 2007-09-28 This collection demonstrates how late Victorian and Edwardian neurology and fiction shared common philosophical concerns and rhetorical strategies. Between 1860 and 1920 witnessed unprecedented interdisciplinary collaboration between scientists and artists finding common ground in the prevailing intellectual climate of biological determinism.

Media, Technology, and Literature in the Nineteenth Century Margaret Linley, 2016-04-29 Operating at the intersection where new technology meets literature this collection discovers the relationship among image sound and touch in the long nineteenth century. The chapters speak to the special mixed media properties of literature while exploring the important interconnections of science technology and art at the historical moment when media was being theorized debated and scrutinized. Each chapter focuses on a specific visual acoustic or haptic dimension of media while also calling attention to the relationships among the three. Famous works such as Wordsworth's I wandered lonely as a cloud and Shelley's Frankenstein are discussed alongside a range of lesser known literary scientific and pornographic writings. Topics include the development of a print culture for the visually impaired the relationship between photography and narrative the kaleidoscope and modern urban experience Christmas gift books poetry painting and music as remediated forms the interface among the piano telegraph and typewriter Ernst Heinrich Weber's model of rationalized tactility and how the shift from visual to auditory telegraphic instruments amplified anxieties about the place of women in nineteenth century information networks. Full of surprising insights and connections the collection offers new impetus for stimulating historical conversations and debates about nineteenth century media while also contributing fresh perspectives on new media and re mediation today.
