Parallel Distributed Processing, Volume 2 James L. McClelland, David E. Rumelhart, PDP Research Group, 1987-07-29 What makes people smarter than computers? These volumes by a pioneering neurocomputing group suggest that the answer lies in the massively parallel architecture of the human mind. They describe a new theory of cognition called connectionism that is challenging the idea of symbolic computation that has traditionally been at the center of debate in theoretical discussions about the mind. The authors' theory assumes the mind is composed of a great number of elementary units connected in a neural network. Mental processes are interactions between these units which excite and inhibit each other in parallel rather than sequential operations. In this context, knowledge can no longer be thought of as stored in localized structures; instead, it consists of the connections between pairs of units that are distributed throughout the network. Volume 1 lays the foundations of this exciting theory of parallel distributed processing, while Volume 2 applies it to a number of specific issues in cognitive science and neuroscience with chapters describing models of aspects of perception, memory, language, and thought.

History and Utopian Disillusion Jun Young Lee, 2008 The series is designed to advance the publication of research pertaining to themes and motifs in literature. The studies cover cross-cultural patterns as well as the entire range of national literatures. They trace the development and use of themes and motifs over extended periods, elucidate the significance of specific themes or motifs for the formation of period styles, and analyze the unique structural function of themes and motifs.

Communities in Fiction J. Hillis Miller, 2014-12-02 Communities in Fiction reads six novels or stories, one each by Trollope, Hardy, Conrad, Woolf, Pynchon, and Cervantes, in the light of theories of community worked out contradictorily by Raymond Williams, Martin Heidegger, and Jean-Luc Nancy. The book's topic is the question of how communities or noncommunities are represented in fictional works. Such fictional communities help the reader understand real communities, including those in which the reader lives. As against the presumption that the trajectory in literature from

Victorian to modern to postmodern is the story of a gradual loss of belief in the possibility of community this book demonstrates that communities have always been presented in fiction as precarious and fractured Moreover the juxtaposition of Pynchon and Cervantes in the last chapter demonstrates that period characterizations are never to be trusted All the features both thematic and formal that recent critics and theorists such as Fredric Jameson and many others have found to characterize postmodern fiction are already present in Cervantes s wonderful early seventeenth century Exemplary Story The Dogs Colloquy All the themes and narrative devices of Western fiction from the beginning of the print era to the present were there at the beginning in Cervantes Most of all however Communities in Fiction looks in detail at its six fictions striving to see just what they say what stories they tell and what narratological and rhetorical devices they use to say what they do say and to tell the stories they do tell The book attempts to communicate to its readers the joy of reading these works and to argue for the exemplary insight they provide into what Heidegger called Mitsein being together in communities that are always problematic and unstable
