Pastoralism Drought Planning:

Pastoralism and Development in Africa Andy Catley, Jeremy Lind, Ian Scoones, 2013-05-07 Once again the Horn of Africa has been in the headlines And once again the news has been bad drought famine conflict hunger suffering and death The finger of blame has been pointed in numerous directions to the changing climate to environmental degradation to overpopulation to geopolitics and conflict to aid agency failures and more But it is not all disaster and catastrophe Many successful development efforts at the margins often remain hidden informal sometimes illegal and rarely in line with standard development prescriptions If we shift our gaze from the capital cities to the regional centres and their hinterlands then a very different perspective emerges These are the places where pastoralists live They have for centuries struggled with drought conflict and famine They are resourceful entrepreneurial and innovative peoples Yet they have been ignored and marginalised by the states that control their territory and the development agencies who are supposed to help them This book argues that while we should not ignore the profound difficulties of creating secure livelihoods in the Greater Horn of Africa there is much to be learned from development successes large and small This book will be of great interest to students and scholars with an interest in development studies and human geography with a particular emphasis on Africa It will also appeal to development policy makers and practitioners Pastoralism, Drought and Planning Natural Resources Institute (Great Britain), 2001-01

Pastoralism and Climate Change in East Africa Yanda, Pius Zebhe, Mung'ong'o, Claude Gasper, 2018-08-03 Pastoralism and Climate Change in East Africa provides systematic and robust empirical investigations on the impact of climate change on pastoral production systems as well as participating in the ongoing debate over the efficacy of traditional pastoralism This book is an initial product of the Project Building Knowledge to Support Climate Change Adaptation for Pastoralist Communities in East Africa implemented by the Centre for Climate Change Studies of the University of Dar es Salaam with support from the Open Society Initiative for Eastern Africa Traditional pastoralism has proved to be a resilient and unique system of adaptations in a dynamic process of unpredictable climatic variability and continuous human interactions with the natural environment in dryland ecosystems Pastoral adaptations and climate induced innovative coping mechanisms have strategically been embedded in the indigenous social structures and resource management value systems Pastoral livelihoods have nevertheless become increasingly vulnerable to climate change impacts as a result of prolonged marginalization and harmful external interventions The negative effect of global climate change has been an added dimension to the already prevailing crisis in the pastoral livelihood system which is substantially driven by non climatic factors of internal and external pressures of change such as population growth bad governance and shrinking rangelands lost to competing activities Investing in Pastoralism David John Pratt, François Le Gall, C. de Haan, 1997-01-01 World Bank Technical Paper No 365 The World Bank has been supporting range livestock development since the 1960s gaining experience that currently contributes to best practices in natural resource management NRM in pastoral areas This report focuses on NRM in the arid rangelands used by pastoralists in Africa and the Middle East offering guidelines for development An introductory chapter on the nature of NRM is followed by advice on preparing for project intervention and by guidelines for specific project components A concluding chapter considers the broader implications for international agencies particularly the World Bank Eight annexes provide additional background information and advice as well as a user guide for practitioners

Pastoralism in the New Millenium Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2001-01-01 Pastoralism refers to the type of farming system which uses extensive grazing on grasslands for livestock production This type of farming covers 25 per cent of the world s land area and supports 20 million households It makes substantial contributions to the economies of developing countries although agricultural encroachment conflict and drought continue to erode this way of life This publication considers key policy issues and trends involved in attempts to improve the livelihoods of pastoralist families and communities

Planning African Development Glen Norcliffe,Tom Pinfold,2012-08-06 First published in 1981 this book concerns specifically the Kenyan experience with regards to development planning but given that the problems of hunger poverty and underdevelopment manifest themselves in slightly different forms across all African countries this book has considerable relevance to development planning across the African continent The first set of essays in this collection address the question of development which is undoubtedly Africa s highest development priority The second grouping of essays considers issues in project planning and asks questions concerning cost method outcome and evaluation of various projects in Kenya

Perspectives on Pastoral Development Isobel Birch,Halima A. O. Shuria,2001 An objective account of a major Oxfam initiative the Wajir pastoral development project in northeast Kenya with its distinctive emphasis on community participation It explains how marginalized groups are developing their own pastoral associations to represent their interests and Oxfame tm s role in facilitating that process It describes an integrated approach to pastoral development supporting the livelihoods of livestock keepers and those who have lost their animals devising strategies to address drought and conflict as part of a longer term agenda for sustainable development and working to influence key decisions made by high level policy makers

Pastoralism in Africa's drylands Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2018-10-29 Pastoral livestock production is crucial to the livelihoods and the economy of Africa s semiarid regions It developed 7 000 years ago in response to long tern climate change It spread throughout Northern Africa as an adaptation to the rapidly changing and increasingly unpredictable arid climate It is practiced in an area representing 43% of Africa s land mass in the different regions of Africa and in some regions it represents the dominant livelihoods system It covers 36 countries stretching from the Sahelian West to the rangelands of Eastern Africa and the Horn and the nomadic populations of Southern Africa with an estimate of 268 million pastoralists The mobility of pastoralists exploiting the animal feed resources along different ecological zones represents a flexible response to a dry and increasingly variable environment It allows pastoral herds to use the drier areas during the wet season and more humid areas during the dry season It ensures pastoral livestock to access sufficient high quality grazing and create economic value The objectives of this report are to investigate the current situation of pastoralism and the vulnerability context in which pastoralism currently functions and to outline the policy resilience programming and research areas of intervention to enhance the resilience of pastoral livelihoods systems Scholarly views of pastoralism s ecological impact have grown more positive since the early 1990s when a new understanding of dryland dynamics led to the so called new rangeland paradigm The new rangeland paradigm represents a shift in the wider discourse on pastoralism from the earlier debates based on the tragedy of the commons The new rangeland paradigm has provided a more comprehensive understanding of the drylands and shown that mobility is an appropriate strategy to exploit the natural resource base in these areas In recent decades the adaptability and mobility of pastoralism in relation to resource variability have been undermined by factors that are embedded in the institutional environment and policy that shape the vulnerability context of pastoralism The report analyzes five factors that undermine the pastoral livelihoods resilience and the implications of these factors for the viability of pastoralism On the basis of the analysis of vulnerability contexts that shape pastoralism the report identifies interventions for increasing pastoral resilience

The Action Plan for Australian Birds 2010 Stephen Garnett, Judit Szabo, Guy Dutson, 2011-09-14 The Action Plan for Australian Birds 2010 is the third in a series of action plans that have been produced at the start of each decade The book analyses the International Union for Conservation of Nature IUCN status of all the species and subspecies of Australia s birds including those of the offshore territories For each bird the size and trend in their population and distribution has been analysed using the latest iteration of IUCN Red List Criteria to determine their risk of extinction The book also provides an account of all those species and subspecies that are or are likely to be extinct Each categorisation is justified on the basis of the latest research including much unpublished material that has been made available during workshops conducted with leading ornithologists and conservation biologists around the country as well as phone interviews and correspondence The result is the most authoritative account yet of the status of Australia s birds In this completely revised edition each account covers not only the 2010 status but provides a retrospective assessment of the status in 1990 and 2000 based on current knowledge taxonomic revisions and changes to the IUCN criteria and then reasons why the status of some taxa has changed over the last two decades Maps have been created specifically for the Action Plan based on vetted data drawn from the records of Birds Australia its members and its partners in many government departments The book contains some surprises some alarming some encouraging The status of some birds has improved over the last two decades as a result of dedicated conservation management Some may not have changed status but at least they are holding their own Many however are continuing to decline and a distressing number are new to the list There is also an increasing number of birds for which captive insurance populations need not only to be considered as a future option but actively pursued before it is too late But this is not a book of lost causes It is a call for action to keep the extraordinary biodiversity we have inherited and pass the legacy to our children Every one of Australia s threatened taxa can be saved This book describes the populations of species at greatest risk and outlines ways we can turn them around 2012 Whitley Award Commendation for Zoological Resource

Prospects for Livestock-Based Livelihoods in Africa's Drylands Cornelis de Haan,2016-11-14 Prospects for Livestock Based Livelihoods in Africa s Drylands examines the challenges and opportunities facing the livestock sector and the people who depend on livestock in the dryland regions of Sub Saharan Africa It presents a novel way of thinking about pastoral development grounded in a conceptual framework that focuses on the multiple shocks that drylands livestock keepers face and how those shocks can be addressed drawing on a state of the art literature review carried out by scientists of leading research institutes and development organizations and integrating the results of an innovative approach to modeling development options for the drylands livestock sector Looking to the future the picture is mixed On the positive side demand for red meat is expected to strengthen in domestic and regional markets suggesting that livestock keepers will have good market opportunities On the negative side a large majority of livestock keepers are classified as poor and the natural feed resource base is likely to be sufficient to enable improved meat and milk production for the growing human population Prospects for the livestock sector through 2030 vary by aridity zone In arid and semi arid zones a reasonable goal for 2030 is to have land use training and microfinance systems established that promote an appropriate balance between human and livestock carrying capacities featuring mainly grassland pastoral systems that reliably and sustainably satisfy the minimum income needs of herder households produce at least a significant part of the demand in local markets for animal source food and provide environmental services for which livestock keepers receive compensation The goal includes significant employment generation outside the sector In the higher rainfall zones of the semi arid areas and in the subhumid zones a reasonable goal for 2030 is to have intensified production systems established featuring mainly mixed livestock arable farming or agro pastoral systems that are closely linked to nearby grassland pastoral systems and that consistently generate marketable surpluses of differentiated red meat and livestock products that can compete not only in the expanding domestic market but also in selected regional markets Economic Spaces of Pastoral Production and Commodity Systems Richard Le Heron,2016-04-29 Pastoralism as a land use system is under recognized in terms of its contribution to food provision livelihoods as well as to human security This book is the first attempt to explore the dynamics of economic spaces of pastoral production and commodity systems for explicit South and North positionings It develops and applies a new approach in combining agri food market and commodity chain perspectives with livelihood approaches This enables new understandings of re aligning exchange relations between the global south and the global north The case studies presented open up new empirical insights in largely under researched areas such as Afghanistan Chad Tibet and Siberia and very recent changes in industrialized economies with major pastoral sectors The book reveals new evidence and theoretical insights about significant changes in established producer consumer relations in agriculture and food Pastoralism and Sustainable

Pastoralism and resilience south of the Sahara Little, Peter D., McPeak, John G., 2014-05-04 The recent popularity of the term resilience in the development discourse concerning arid and semiarid lands in Africa can be traced to two major international issues The first is climate change concerned with how to build resilient communities in the face of increasingly extreme weather events The other is recurrent humanitarian crises especially traced to the most recent drought and conflict induced 2011 disaster in the Horn of Africa Both of these phenomena have strong relevance for African pastoralism which many climate change models show will be strongly impacted The objectives of this brief are to summarize 1 applications of a resilience framework for pastoralism 2 key challenges to resilience among pastoralists 3 local responses and initiatives and 4 conclusions and development implications The brief draws on research findings and data from northern Kenya and southern Ethiopia gathered for the Pastoral Risk Management Project PARIMA as well as studies from elsewhere in Africa Social Dimensions of Climate Change Robin Mearns, Andrew Norton, 2009-12-02 While major strides have been made in the
