Educating for Humanity Mike Seymour, Henry M. Levin,2015-11-17 At a time of profound crises around the world when social justice peace democracy and the environment seem under increasing threat the promise of a world for all seems a viable aspiration for education Ample evidence from many schools today and dating back throughout the last century prove that the purpose of educating young people to develop character compassion purpose and commitment is integral with the mastery of intellectual skills and life competencies Schooling without a doubt can play a monumental part in the development of the personal values people take with them to the world Unfortunately as the saying goes if you don't know where you're going you'll probably get somewhere else Educational policy directions over the last twenty years have veered far away from the important work of educating for humanity This book makes a powerful appeal to revisit educational purpose in light of what is most fundamental and important to human beings everywhere The authors address timely issues such as high stakes testing school choice and privatization of education in looking beyond these measures to new approaches to educational excellence

Mama, PhD Elrena Evans, Caroline Grant, 2008 Every year American universities publish glowing reports stating their commitment to diversity often showing statistics of female hires as proof of success Yet although women make up increasing numbers of graduate students graduate degree recipients and even new hires academic life remains overwhelming a man's world The reality that the statistics fail to highlight is that the presence of women specifically those with children in the ranks of tenured faculty has not increased in a generation Further those women who do achieve tenure track placement tend to report slow advancement income disparity and lack of job satisfaction compared to their male colleagues Amid these disadvantages what is a Mama PhD to do This literary anthology brings together a selection of deeply felt personal narratives by smart interesting women who explore the continued inequality of the sexes in higher education and suggest changes that could make universities more family friendly workplaces The contributors hail from a wide array of disciplines and bring with them a variety of perspectives including those of single and adoptive parents They address topics that range from the level of policy to practical day to day concerns including caring for a child with special needs breastfeeding on campus negotiating viable maternity and family leave policies job sharing and telecommuting options and fitting into desk chair combinations while eight months pregnant Candid provocative and sometimes with a wry sense of humor the thirty five essays in this anthology speak to and offer support for any woman attempting to combine work and family as well as anyone who is interested in improving the university's ability to live up to its reputation to be among the most progressive of American institutions
