

Life in the RAINFOREST

The world's rainforests are perfectly-balanced ecosystems, home to half of all the world's species. They provide everything that the plants, animals and indigenous people living in them need to thrive. Many species rely on each other for survival, so if some plants are destroyed, or an animal becomes extinct, it can have a devastating effect on the rest of the forest. Take a trip deep into this African rainforest for a closer look.

Watering the WORLD

Rainforests cover all the giant water pumps. The big drops of rain on their leaves drive up water - and the trees' leaves release it back into the air as rain. It's called the water cycle. It's like an invisible pump that keeps the world's rivers and oceans flowing. Thanks for the shower!

Busy BEES

Bees are one of the most important insects in the rainforest. As they buzz about collecting nectar, they pass pollen to the plants which allows plants to reproduce. From flower to flower, spreading seeds to grow. Bees are the rainforest's 'milkshake delivery' - it's why most people living in the rainforest love them.

TRUNKS in the trees

Elephants only stand about 10% of what they eat. So most plants and trees are too small to eat. Instead, they use their trunks to reach up, pulling in the leaves and fruit. In the jungle, it's like a giant hand reaching up to grab the food. Amazingly, when you see an elephant's trunk, you can tell if it's a male or a female.

Gardeners of the FOREST

Gorillas spend their time eating leaves, fruits, seeds and shoots. By spreading seeds, gorillas play a key role in maintaining the African rainforests and, hence, the world's climate. When you go deep into the forest, you'll see a lot of fruit and seeds. That's because gorillas are the forest's gardeners, helping seeds to grow. It's like a giant hand reaching up to grab the food.

Hidden FRUITS

There are lots of amazing fruits in the rainforest - if you know where to look. Using their trunks and tails, the indigenous forest people dig up the fruit and eat it. It's like a giant hand reaching up to grab the food. Amazingly, when you see an elephant's trunk, you can tell if it's a male or a female.

Tiny TROOPERS

Bees, ants, termites and beetles may be small, but they're everywhere in the rainforest. They have many jobs - some are like the forest's gardeners, some are like the forest's cleaners. They're like the forest's army. They're like the forest's police. They're like the forest's army. They're like the forest's police.

Forest FRIENDS

Many birds, like the African grey parrot, live in the rainforest. They have many jobs - some are like the forest's gardeners, some are like the forest's cleaners. They're like the forest's army. They're like the forest's police.

Tropical TREASURES

For centuries, the rainforest has been a treasure trove of everything - from spices and medicines to food and shelter. It's like a giant hand reaching up to grab the food. Amazingly, when you see an elephant's trunk, you can tell if it's a male or a female.
