National Security Policy The Decision Making Process:

Managing National Security Policy William W. Newmann, 2010-06-15 The U S national security decision making system is a product of the Cold War Formed in 1947 with the National Security Council it developed around the demands of competing with and containing the USSR But the world after the collapse of communism and particularly the tragedy of September 11 is vastly different A threatening but familiar enemy has given way to a complex environment of more diverse and less predictable threats As the creation of the Homeland Security Council and Office of Homeland Security indicate the United States must now reevaluate standard national security processes for this more uncertain world In this timely book William W Newmann examines the way presidents manage their advisory process for national security decision making and the way that process evolves over the course of an administration s term Three detailed case studies show how the president and his senior advisors managed arms control and nuclear strategy during the first terms of the Carter Reagan and G H W Bush presidencies These studies enhanced by interviews with key members of the national security teams including James Baker Brent Scowcroft and Zbigniew Brzezinski reveal significant patterns of structure and adaptation They provide a window to how decision making in the modern White House really works at a moment when national security decisions are again at the top of the agenda Specifically Newmann investigates this pattern Each president begins his administration with a standard National Security Council based interagency process which he then streamlines toward a reliance on senior officials working in small groups and a confidence structure of a few key advisors Newmann examines the institutional pressures that push administrations in this direction as he also weighs the impact of the leadership styles of the presidents themselves In so doing he reaches the conclusion that decision making can be an audition process through which presidents discover which advisors they trust And the most successful process is one that balances formal informal and confidence sources to maintain full discussion of diverse opinions while settling those debates informally at the senior most levels Unlike previous studies Managing National Security Policy views decision making as dynamic rather than as a static system inaugurated at the beginning of a president s term The key to understanding the decision making process rests upon the study of the evolving relationships between the president and his senior advisors Awareness of this evolution paints a complex portrait of policy making which may help future presidents design national security decision structures that fit the realities of the office in today s world
