National Economic Planning What Is Left:

National Economic Planning Don Lavoie,1985-06-01 Don Lavoie argues that the radical Left's enthusiasm for planning has been a tragic mistake and that progressive social change requires the abandonment of this traditional view Lavoie argues that planning whether Marxism economic democracy or industrial policy can only disrupt social and economic coordination He challenges both radicals and their critics to begin reformulating our whole notion of progressive economic change without reliance on central planning National Economic Planning What is Left will challenge thinkers and policymakers of every political persuasion National Economic Planning Don C. Globalizing Economy Murat Yülek,2014-09-04 This book discusses national development planning in the context of a globalized world economy National economic development planning the process of defining strategic economic objectives for a country and designing policies and institutional frameworks to attain them was popular in many countries in the 1960s and 1970s Over time it lost its appeal More recently with globalization accelerating and economic competition increasing it is making a comeback in different countries under different forms National planning in this new era is different than the earlier quantitative planning approaches It employs different tools such as strategic visions and action plans revived forms of physical infrastructure planning industrial policy and cluster policy Built on the research of international scholars with firsthand knowledge of the countries in question this volume presents and evaluates current national planning strategies and policy worldwide It will be of interest to both academicians who study and teach globalization and development as well as policy makers who may use it as a reference as they contemplate their own strategies An Institutionalist Guide to

Heesterman,2012-12-06 This book is about the specification of linear econometric models and for this reason some important related fields have been deliberately omitted I did not want to discuss the problems of parameter estimation at least not in any detail as there are other books on these problems written by specialized statisticians This book is about the models themselves and macro economic models in particular A second related subject is the policy decision that can be made with the help of a model While I did write a chapter on policy decisions I limited myself to some extent because of my views on planning as such The logical approach to this problem is in terms of mathematical programming but our models and our ideas about the policies we want are too crude for its effective utilisation A realistic formulation of the problem should involve non linearities in an essential way the models I consider and most existing models are linear At the present state of econometrics I do not really believe in such a thing as the optimal plan The possible result of bad planning or no planning at all for instance massive unemployment sudden financial crises unused capital equipment or the production of unsalable goods is agreed to be undesirable Programming methods may of course be needed if only for having a systematic algorithm to find a solution that avoids this kind of obvious non optimality However the main emphasis is on forecasting models
