Geriatric Medicine Christine K. Cassel,Rosanne Leipzig,Harvey Jay Cohen,Eric B. Larson,Diane E. Meier,2006-05-29 Since the publication of the third edition of Geriatric Medicine extraordinary advances have occurred in the science of aging and the potential for biomedical research to give us answers to many if not most of the age related disorders that threaten the quality of life in older years At the most basic level the successful mapping of the human genome was declared complete in the fall of 2000 Understanding the map of the human genome is as important as understanding the map of genomes of important laboratory species ranging from the microscopic worms and fruit flies used in most classic genetic studies to rodents such as laboratory mice and eventually to primates on which much of the research on the aging human brain is done The genetic maps of all of these species including our own does not answer clinical questions but it does open the door to dramatic rapid and efficient answers to questions about the genetic polymorphisms related to diseases in humans The telomerase story also unfolded since the third edition Telomerase is an enzyme responsible for maintaining the telomeres the redundant DNA portions at the end of chromosomes whose shortening seems to be linked directly to cell senescence apoptosis and the control over cell death which at the level of the individual cell seems to be linked to the decline of organ function and eventually aging and death within the organism Screening Angela E Raffle,J. A. Muir Gray,2007-09-06 Screening is the routine testing of populations to identify individuals who may have a particular medical condition or disease This book covers the theory and evidence behind screening and serves as a practical non technical introduction to the subject for public health practitioners involved in all aspects of screening NIH Publication ,1982 Report to Council on Program National Institute on Aging,1980 Fulfilling the Potential of Cancer Prevention and Early Detection National Research Council,Institute of Medicine,National Cancer Policy Board,2003-05-07 Cancer ranks second only to heart disease as a leading cause of death in the United States making it a tremendous burden in years of life lost patient suffering and economic costs Fulfilling the Potential for Cancer Prevention and Early Detection reviews the proof that we can dramatically reduce cancer rates The National Cancer Policy Board part of the Institute of Medicine outlines a national strategy to realize the promise of cancer prevention and early detection including specific and wide ranging recommendations Offering a wealth of information and directly addressing major controversies the book includes A detailed look at how significantly cancer could be reduced through lifestyle changes evaluating approaches used to alter eating smoking and exercise habits An analysis of the intuitive notion that screening for cancer leads to improved health outcomes including a discussion of screening methods potential risks and current recommendations An examination of cancer prevention and control opportunities in primary health care delivery settings including a review of interventions aimed at improving provider performance Reviews of professional education and training programs research trends and opportunities and federal
