U.S. Scientists and Engineers, 1986 Women and Minorities in Science and Engineering, 1992 Women and Minorities in Science and Engineering Michael F. Crowley, National Science Foundation (U.S.), 1986 Patronage, Practice, and the Culture of American Science Hugh Richard Slotten, 1994-06-24 In this book Hugh Richard Slotten explores the institutional and cultural history of science in the United States The main focus is on the activities of Alexander Dallas Bache great grandson of Benjamin Franklin and the acknowledged chief of the American scientific community during the second third of the nineteenth century Bache played a central role in the organization and management of a number of key scientific institutions including the American Association for the Advancement of Science the Smithsonian Institution and the National Academy of Sciences But his dominance in these institutions was made possible through his control of an organization less well known today the United States Coast Survey which he superintended from 1843 until his death in 1867 Under Bache's command the Coast Survey became the central scientific institution in antebellum America Using richly detailed archival records Slotten pursues an analysis of Bache and the Coast Survey that illuminates important historiographic themes We gain a better understanding of the particular style of nineteenth century American science by examining the role of the Coast Survey as a source of patronage Perhaps most important this study explores the ways in which scientific knowledge and practice are embedded within local contexts Although Bache sought to use the Coast Survey to raise the status of American science partly by emulating European scientific elites his efforts also reflected the cultural and political values of antebellum America Sloten thus analyzes the interrelationship between political culture patterns of patronage and the institutional practice of science in the United States

Department of Housing and Urban Development--independent agencies appropriations for 1978 United States. Congress. House. Committee on Appropriations. Subcommittee on HUD-Independent Agencies,1977 Who's Asking? Douglas L. Medin,Megan Bang,2014-01-03 Analysis and case studies show that including different orientations toward the natural world makes for more effective scientific practice and science education The answers to scientific questions depend on who s asking because the questions asked and the answers sought reflect the cultural values and orientations of the questioner These values and orientations are most often those of Western science In Who s Asking Douglas Medin and Megan Bang argue that despite the widely held view that science is objective value neutral and acultural scientists do not shed their cultures at the laboratory or classroom door their practices reflect their values belief systems and worldviews Medin and Bang argue further that scientist diversity the participation of researchers and educators with different cultural orientations provides new perspectives and leads to more effective science and better science education Medin and Bang compare Native American and European American orientations toward the natural world and apply these findings to science education The European American model they find sees humans as separated from nature the Native American model sees humans as part of a natural ecosystem Medin and Bang then report on the development of ecologically oriented and community based
