The Monthly Army List Great Britain. Army,1884      Aisne 1914 Paul Kendall,2012-05-01 The Battle of the Aisne fought in September 1914 introduced a new and savage mode of warfare to the soldiers of the British Expeditionary Force their French allies and to the German Army Both officers and men were trained to fight mobile wars When they reached the north bank of the Aisne the Old Contemptibles would be stopped by the Germans entrenched on high ground armed with machine guns and supported by heavy artillery The British commanders would naively send their troops on futile assaults up slopes devoid of cover to attack the German lines dug in on the ridges along the Chemin des Dames and concealed by woodland The British did not even have grenades The BEF suffered 12 000 casualties Their commanders who were not trained to fight a modern war were lost for a solution or even a strategy It was on the Chemin des Dames that the first trenches of the Western Front were dug and where the line that would stretch from the Swiss frontier to the North Sea began The Battle of the Aisne saw the dawn of trench warfare and a stalemate that would last for the next four years Wide ranging archival research by author Paul Kendall makes this the first in depth study of the battle in print His correspondence with surviving relatives of those who fought brings a human face to the terrible casualty statistics that would come to define the trenches      "The" National Gazetteer Great Britain. Board of Trade,1901      The London Gazette ,1903      Custom, Improvement and the Landscape in Early Modern Britain Richard W. Hoyle,2017-03-02 A great deal has been written about the acceleration of English agriculture in the early modern period In the late middle ages it was hard to see that English agriculture was so very different from that of the continent but by 1750 levels of agricultural productivity in Britain were well ahead of those general in northern Europe The country had become much more urban and the proportion of the population engaged in agriculture had fallen Customary modes of behaviour whilst often bitterly defended had largely been swept away Contemporaries were quite clear that a process of improvement had taken place which had seen agriculture reshaped and made much more productive Exactly what that process was has remained surprisingly obscure This volume addresses the fundamental notion of improvement in the development of the British landscape from the sixteenth to the nineteenth century Contributors present a variety of cases of how improvement custom and resistance impacted on the local landscape which includes manorial estates enclosures fens forests and urban commons Disputes between tenants and landlords and between neighbouring landlords over improvement meant that new economic and social identities were forged in the battle between innovation and tradition The volume also includes an analysis of the role of women as agricultural improvers and a case study of what can happen when radical improvement failed The volume will be essential reading for scholars of landscape studies rural and agrarian history but will also provide a useful context for anybody studying the historical legacy of mankind s exploitation of the environment and its social economic legal and political consequences The Macmillan Guide to the United Kingdom 1978-79 NA
