

The Perceptions of Race in America

Topic: History | Words: 559 | Pages: 2

In the US, racism stands out as a sophisticated dilemma that has affected the country for many centuries. Cultural and Racial biases have been in existence for long periods. The biases are witnessed in almost all sectors of our societies. They are witnessed in our schools, our justice system, and our healthcare system, among other institutions. In spite of concerted efforts to eliminate these biases, they still exist among us. It is difficult to deny the existence of racial and cultural biases, for there are no places where an individual can go subconsciously without the imagination of encountering cultural and racial biases. One will consciously go to such places if he or she has a position of power and believes that racial and cultural bias is wrong and it needs to be corrected.

The ideas are expressed in "The case for Reparations" and "A deeper black: Race in America" by Ta-Nehisi. Coates is calling for a review of the attitudes towards race. The author refers to the centuries of racial abuse in the United States. The historical tendencies represent not only the abusive attitudes towards African Americans but point to the constant shapeshifting of racism's manifestations (Coates, 2017). As society evolves, it changes its attitudes from the brutality of the all-encompassing slavery to the less obvious racial microaggressions, police profiling, and housing policies (Coates, 2015). Yet, the essence of these issues remains the same, and the African Americans are the ones who are in a constant fight for their rights and against oppression.

Racism has affected the lives of many people in the US. Despite the legal

Perceptions Of Race And Nation In English And American Travel Writers 1833 1914:

Perceptions of Race and Nation in English and American Travel Writers, 1833-1914 Erik S. Schmeller, 2004 This book focuses on how nineteenth century English and American travelers discussed issues of race in relation to both their home country and the country they were visiting It also illustrates how regardless of nationality between 1833 and 1914 travelers perceptions of race fluctuated to reflect changing national identities Encompassing the perspectives of both male and female travelers from different backgrounds Perceptions of Race and Nation in English and American Travel Writers 1833 1914 explores the role of race in national identity a topic that remains relevant for scholarly interest and debate

Taste of Control René Alexander D. Orquiza, 2020-07-17 First Impressions Menus Travel Guides Cookbooks Education Advertisements A Century of Travels in China Douglas Kerr, Julia Kuehn, 2007-05-01 Writings of travelers have shaped ideas about an evolving China while preconceived ideas about China also shaped the way they saw the country A Century of Travels in China explores the impressions of these writers on various themes from Chinese cities and landscapes to the work of Europeans abroad From the time of the first Opium War to the declaration of the People s Republic China s history has been one of extraordinary change and stubborn continuities At the same time the country has beguiled scared and puzzled people in the West The Victorian public admired and imitated Chinese fashions in furniture and design gardens and clothing while maintaining a generally negative idea of the Chinese empire as pagan backward and cruel In the first half of the twentieth century the fascination continued Most foreigners were aware that revolutionary changes were taking place in Chinese politics and society yet most still knew very little about the country But what about those few people from the English speaking world who had first hand experience of the place What did they have to say about the real China To answer this question we have to turn to the travel accounts and memoirs of people who went to see for themselves during China s most traumatic century While this book represents the work of expert scholars it is also accessible to non specialists with an interest in travel writing and China and care has been taken to explain the critical terms and ideas deployed in the essays from recent scholarship of the travel genre Biography and the Black Atlantic Lisa A. Lindsay, John Wood

Sweet, 2013-10-09 In Biography and the Black Atlantic leading historians in the field of Atlantic studies examine the biographies and autobiographies of eighteenth and nineteenth century African descended people and reflect on the opportunities and limitations these life stories present to studies of slavery and the African diaspora The essays remind us that historical developments like slavery and empire building were mostly experienced and shaped by men and women outside of the elite political economic and military groups to which historians often turn as sources Despite the scarcity of written records and other methodological challenges the contributors to Biography and the Black Atlantic have pieced together vivid glimpses into lives of remarkable through previously unknown enslaved and formerly enslaved people who moved struggled and endured in different parts of Africa the Americas and Europe From the woman of Fulani origin who made her way from Revolutionary Haiti to Louisiana to the free black American who sailed for Liberia and the former slave from Brazil who became a major slave trader in Angola these stories render the Atlantic world as a densely and sometimes unpredictably interconnected sphere Biography and the Black Atlantic demonstrates the power of individual stories to illuminate history though the life histories recounted here often involved extraordinary achievement and survival against the odds they also portray the struggle for self determination and community in the midst of alienation that lies at the heart of the modern condition Contributors James T Campbell Vincent Carretta Roquinaldo Ferreira Jean Michel H brard Martin Klein Lloyd S Kramer Sheryl Kroen Jane Landers Lisa A Lindsay Joseph C Miller Cassandra Pybus Jo o Jos Reis Rebecca J Scott Jon Sensbach John Wood Sweet
