Rooting cuttings of tropical trees. (Tropical trees K A (Alan) Longman,1993 Growing Good Tropical Trees for Planting K. A. Longman,1998 This Manual is the third in a series of readable well illustrated handbooks about propagating and planting tropical trees The five Manuals have been designed to provide clear and concise information on how to select grow plant and care for tropical trees in both moist and drier parts of the tropics They are intended for anyone interested in growing trees from the smallholder to the largescale grower from local communities to national governments and from school and further education teachers to research and extension staff of agricultural and forestry departments They provide illustrated stepbystep instructions practical guidelines and an outline of the thought processes behind them Manual 3 deals with the allimportant stage of the tree nursery Growing good planting stock that is likely to establish successfully in the field depends on choosing a suitable site for the tree nursery having some understanding of how tropical trees grow selecting appropriate genetic origins of seeds and cuttings producing young trees with favourable root systems recognising the important relationships between trees and microorganisms building a welltrained nursery team looking after the young trees carefullyThe procedures described in this series of Manuals may be used with the majority of woody species to provide diverse seedling or clonal mixtures They include techniques for domestication so that superior planting stock can increasingly be used This can help to capture more rapidly the great potential for multiple usefulness offered by tropical trees while also encouraging conservation of their genetic resources Tropical Trees K. A. Longman,1993 Raising Seedlings of Tropical Trees Kenneth Alan Longman,2003 Planting tropical trees is often hampered by the difficulty of obtaining enough good seed of the right species After describing the process of sexual reproduction in trees this manual first looks at the possibilities for stimulating flower formation and for increasing the setting of fruits It provides all the information necessary to choose the best sources for seeds and to select the best seeds for a particular planting site Practical instructions are given on how best to germinate the seeds and how to nurture and care for the young seedlings Preparing to Plant Tropical Trees Kenneth Alan Longman,2002-01-01 This Manual is the fourth in a series of readable well illustrated handbooks for propagating and planting tropical trees The five Manuals have been designed to provide clear and concise information on how to select grow plant and care for tropical trees They are intended for anyone interested in growing trees from the small holder to the large scale grower from local communities to national governments and from school and further education teachers to research and extension staff of agricultural and forestry departments They provide illustrated step by step instructions practical guidelines and an outline of the thought process lying behind them Manual 4 is concerned with the key choices that lie between propagation of good planting stock and its planting and successful establishment These usually include good communication between all those with an interest some understanding of how tropical ecosystems function a consideration of the type of planting site choosing which groups of trees to plant deciding on a suitable growing system for the young trees preparing the site for planting The procedures described in this series of Manuals may be used with the majority of woody species to provide diverse seedling or clonal mixtures They include techniques for domestication so that superior planting stock can increasingly be used this can help to capture more rapidly the great potential for multiple usefulness offered by tropical trees while also encouraging conservation of their genetic resources

Suzuki,K. Ishii,S. Sakurai,S. Sasaki,2006-06-18 This book is intended to be a record of the Biotechnology Assisted Re Afforestation Project in the Asia Pacific Region BIO REFOR since 1992 conducted in cooperation with the International Union of Forest Research Organizations IUFRO The purpose of the project is to promote exchanges of information of fundamental research on indigenous species in the Asia Pacific Region in order to restore natural forests The production cultivation and maintenance of forest tree species provide highly sustainable production systems that conserve soils the microenvironment and biodiversity The key technology for biomass production of forests is propagation via micropropagation or traditional propagation However there are many recalcitrant species among useful forest trees to be propagated in large numbers Recent advances in mycorrhizal technology and in vitro culture have made it possible to commercially propagate useful trees for reforestation In this book comprehensive information is provided on propagation mycorrhizal inoculation and reforestation of economically and environmentally important forest trees information that usually is available only in widely scattered resources Here we include a wide area of the ecology and physiology of dipterocarps as a general overview and then cover propagation techniques mycorrhizal symbiosis man made forests and biodiversity in the Asia Pacific region
