<https://www.scooparticles.com/news-society-articles/economics-articles/trends-nature-national-development-planning-nigeria-1789214.html>

"Development planning is about coming up with well-researched and well-reasoned plans that prioritize and synchronize activities, given the scarce resources at disposal. The aim of any national development plan should therefore be to utilize the available resources more effectively to achieve well-defined objectives" (Alweendo, 2017). The government plays a key role in attaining economic growth and development, and it's expected for national governments to provide a meaningful periodic plan through which the general welfare of society can improve economically, socially, politically, among others. Nigeria like many other countries has produced different heads of state, who came up with multifarious national development plans in the search for economic growth and development.

The First National Development Plan (1962-1968) was profounded and adopted after the attainment of Independence in 1960, the national government of Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa decided to continue with the tradition of having a development plan after the colonial era. The plan was inaugurated with the aim of buttressing economic growth, and truncate the dependence on external ascendancy for the development of the nation. The objectives of the plan are to increase the country's growth domestic product, to achieve sustainable development and employment, to bring the equitable distribution of income, to improve the standard of living, and maintain financial stability. While the cornerstone of the plan focused on human resources, industry, infrastructure, natural resources, balance of payment, agriculture, transportation, electric power, health, and education. The plan quantitative targets are the growth rate, private consumption, government consumption, public sector investment, private investment, savings, and import surplus. The nature of the first plan was impressive and compendious, but the political cataclysm in the country which resulted in a civil war made the plan to become almost redundant.

Architecture and Politics in Nigeria Nnamdi Elleh,2016-12-08 In 1975 the Nigerian authorities decided to construct a new postcolonial capital called Abuja and together with several internationally renowned architects these military leaders collaborated to build a city for three million inhabitants Founded five years after the Civil War with Biafra which caused around 1 7 million deaths the city was envisaged as a place where justice would reign and where people from different social religious ethnic and political backgrounds would come together in a peaceful manner and work together to develop their country and its economy These were all laudable goals but they ironically mobilized certain forces from around the country in opposition against the Federal Government of Nigeria The international and modernist style architecture and the fact that the government spent tens of billions of dollars constructing this idealized capital ended up causing more strife and conflict

For groups like Boko Haram a Nigerian Al Qaida affiliate organization and other smaller ethnic groups seeking to have a say in how the country's oil wealth is spent Abuja symbolized everything in Nigeria they sought to change By examining the creation of the modernist national public spaces of Abuja within a broader historical and global context this book looks at how the successes and the failures of these spaces have affected the citizens of the country and have in fact radicalized individuals with these spaces being scene of some of the most important political events and terrorist targets including bombings and protest rallies Although focusing on Nigeria's capital the study has a wider global implication in that it draws attention to how postcolonial countries that were formed at the turn of the twentieth century are continuously fragmenting and remade by the emergence of new nation states like South Sudan Oxford Agrarian Studies ,1977 Population

Policy and Women's Rights Ruth Dixon-Mueller,1993-03-30 Global population policies are under intense scrutiny as environmental and development organizations worry about the threat of overpopulation and call for stronger measures of population control At the same time women's organizations in both developing and industrialized countries are intensifying their attacks on the simplistic thinking of the population controllers and the quest for a technological fix on the part of the family planning establishment Population Policy and Women's Rights presents a forceful argument for a more responsive approach to fertility limitation in developing countries one that builds on women's concerns about their survival and security and strengthens women's rights Ruth Dixon Mueller reviews the history of the debate between feminists and the birth control movement examines the forces affecting U S population policy on the domestic and international fronts and documents the relationship between women's reproductive rights and their rights in other areas Dixon Mueller begins by focusing on the evolution of the political positions of the women's movement and the birth control population control movements She examines the relationship between different aspects of women's rights and reproductive choice in developing countries She concludes with a proposal for a woman centered approach to reproductive policy making based on promoting women's rights and protecting women's sexual and reproductive health Written from a sociological perspective Population Policy and Women's Rights is recommended for researchers policy makers and students in the fields of population development women's studies and human rights Africa Since 1914 ABC-Clio Information Services,1985 Dictionary
