Accompanying the National Civic League's 105th Conference on Governance entitled New Politics for a New Century this issue is an impassioned argument against the common assumptions of citizen apathy as a reason for decreasing public engagement in the democratic process. Instead contributors reveal a sophisticated citizenry with just cause for anger over the obstacles to good government and social change and their growing media-fed presumption of bad intent from our political leadership. In the face of these daunting factors this issue examines positive trends in rising politics of volunteerism and philanthropy while demonstrating that these are not the sole solution to collectively effecting social change in our country. Instead chapters demonstrate methods that the whole tradition of the good government movement can be reengaged to make government more responsive and explore the promise of merging traditional good government movement goals with the active and successful empowerment and poverty movements emerging from communities of color. Other topics discussed include outreach to youth, media accountability, and linking political processes to specific outcomes. Even the concept of political reform initially developed as a tool to place barriers against the types of fraud and abuses common in voter participation over a hundred years ago is subject to reform itself. With this issue the National Civic League offers a powerful resource for those up to facing the task.

National Civic Review, Issues in Democratic Politics Robert Loper, 2002-10-02. This issue explores approaches that develop effective connections between political activity at the local level with ongoing national debates. Contributors examine how forums for public deliberation can become effective tools to engage more citizens in the dialogue surrounding community decision-making processes. The essential role foundations can play in broadening the reach and deepening the impact of national democratic discourse is also detailed. Proposed models for cooperation between the nonprofit sector and the commercial media demonstrate the importance of accurate and reliable information and an informed citizenry. Recent reforms in instant runoff voting and the growing impact of money on state-level campaigns and elections are reviewed for their ability to widen

Events of the new decade have encouraged democratic societies like ours to think more deeply about the kind of society we want to create and about how we can improve our efforts to do so This issue focuses on some of the most interesting work being done in the American Communities Movement today and contains articles by leading practitioners on the promise heralded by convergence in tools values and practices It examines the ideas that emerged from a series of dialogues on community reform organized by the National Civic League and the Coalition for Healthier Cities and Communities Chapters provide models from active programs in community level reform from a variety of cities and municipalities The obstacles and opportunities encountered in a community improvement project are viewed through the lens of the Jacksonville Community Council Inc and their experiences A new model for human service delivery developed by the Human Service Planning Alliance in Des Moines demonstrates that well time and well targeted social investments produce significant positive returns It also provides a perspective on the ongoing debate over the changing role of government the significance of the new public service and the enduring importance of democratic values      National Civic Review, No. 3, Fall 1998 NCR (National Civic Review),NCR Staff,Jossey-Bass Publishers,1998-10-01 With real life examples drawn from communities using dynamic innovative approaches to problem solving efforts at the local level this issue highlights successful programs of regional social changes which can become profound regenerative agents of increasing citizen involvement at the national level Lessons learned in systems change and government reform in Indianapolis Indiana and Charlotte North Carolina also demonstrate that although there is no one set path for systems reform a community s development becomes linked to the changes that occurred before and contributes in some way to additional reforms in the future The issue offers additional examples of communities leading the way in such areas as strategic planning community development systems change racial understanding and political reform Contributors also detail the five principles and practices that communities have used to recreate a successful citizen based approach to politics In a special focus section on Civic Infrastructure Allan Wallis Jarle P Crocker and Bill Schechter explore the perspectives of academics public advocates philanthropists and community development practitioners on the uses of social capital This article is Part One in a two part series that concludes in NCR Volume 87 Number 4      National Civic Review Michael McGrath,2007
