Native American Fiction:

Native American Fiction David Treuer, 2006-08-22 An entirely new approach to reading understanding and enjoying Native American fiction This book has been written with the narrow conviction that if Native American literature is worth thinking about at all it is worth thinking about as literature The vast majority of thought that has been poured out onto Native American literature has puddled for the most part on how the texts are positioned in relation to history or culture Rather than create a comprehensive cultural and historical genealogy for Native American literature David Treuer investigates a selection of the most important Native American novels and with a novelist's eye and a critic's mind examines the intricate process of understanding literature on its own terms Native American Fiction A User's Manual is speculative witty engaging and written for the inquisitive reader These essays on Sherman Alexie Forrest Carter James Fenimore Cooper Louise Erdrich Leslie Marmon Silko and James Welch are rallying cries for the need to read literature as literature and ultimately reassert the importance and primacy of the word

Dreams of Fiery Stars Catherine Rainwater, 2010-08-03 Selected by Choice magazine as an Outstanding Academic Book for 1999 Since the 1968 publication of N Scott Momaday's House Made of Dawn a new generation of Native American storytellers has chosen writing over oral traditions While their works have found an audience by observing many of the conventions of the mainstream novel Native American written narrative has emerged as something distinct from the postmodern novel with which it is often compared In Dreams of Fiery Stars Catherine Rainwater examines the novels of writers such as Momaday Linda Hogan Leslie Marmon Silko Gerald Vizenor and Louise Erdrich and contends that the very act of writing narrative imposes constraints upon these authors that are foreign to Native American tradition Their works amount to a break with and a transformation of American Indian storytelling The book focuses on the agenda of social and cultural regeneration encoded in contemporary Native American narrative and addresses key questions about how these works achieve their overtly stated political and revisionary aims Rainwater explores the ways in which the writers create readers who understand the connection between storytelling and personal and social transformation considers how contemporary Native American narrative rewrites Western notions of space and time examines the existence of intertextual connections between Native American works and looks at the vital role of Native American literature in mainstream society today

Mediation in Contemporary Native American Fiction James Ruppert, 1995 Mediation is the term James Ruppert uses to describe his important new theory of reading Native American fiction Focusing on novels of six major contemporary American writers N Scott Momaday James Welch Leslie Silko Gerald Vizenor D Arcy McNickle and Louise Erdrich Ruppert analyzes the ways in which these writers draw upon their bicultural heritage guiding Native and non Native readers alike to a different and expanded understanding of each other's worlds While Native American writers may criticize white society revealing its past and present injustices their emphasis Ruppert argues is on healing survival and continuance Their fiction aims to produce cross cultural understanding rather than divisiveness To that end they articulate the perspectives and values of competing world views In particular they create characters who manifest what Ruppert calls multiple identities determined by both Native and non Native perceptions of the self These writers use a variety of narrative techniques deriving from different cultural traditions They might incorporate Native oral storytelling techniques adapting them to written form or they might reconstruct Native mythologies investing them with new meaning and relevance by applying them to contemporary situations As novel writers they also include features more characteristic of western European writing such as the omniscient narrator or the detective story plot
