Museums and the Representation of Native Canadians Moira McLoughlin, 2018-10-24 If we were to think about museums as three dimensional maps as spaces to be divided defended and privileged what would they tell us about the place of Native Canadians within the larger nation Utilizing a combination of exhibit analysis and interviews this book explores how Canadian history anthropology and art museums have situated Native Canadian history and culture within a larger narrative of nationhood Until very recently these museums have with few exceptions perpetuated the continued isolation of Native Canadians on the Other side of carefully demarcated boundaries of time space and culture Despite a living and highly politicized presence outside their walls inside these museums Native Canadians have remained fixed and isolated in time and space This book discusses how this particular image of Native Canadians has been translated into the numerous dichotomies and borders of the museum between modern and traditional past and present myth and science progress and stasis active and passive and ultimately us and them However in tribal museums and more recent programming at the larger museums we are able to identify alternative maps that realign these borders and give voice to alternative constructions of these histories The past decade has seen enormous change in how museum curators educators and directors imagine their role in these museums and more particularly in the construction of a history of Native Canadians This book considers how museums and those who work within them have responded to the challenge of writing a more complex and multivocal history for the nation Ph D dissertation the Annenberg School for Communication University of Pennsylvania 1992 revised with new preface bibliography and index

Eating Asian America Robert Ji-Song Ku, Martin F Manalansan, Anita Mannur, 2013-09-23 Examines the ways our conceptions of Asian American food have been shaped Chop suey Sushi Curry Adobo Kimchi The deep associations Asians in the United States have with food have become ingrained in the American popular imagination So much so that contentious notions of ethnic authenticity and authority are marked by and argued around images and ideas of food Eating Asian America

A Food Studies Reader collects burgeoning new scholarship in Asian American Studies that centers the study of foodways and culinary practices in our understanding of the racialized underpinnings of Asian Americanness. It does so by bringing together twenty scholars from across the disciplinary spectrum to inaugurate a new turn in food studies: the refusal to yield to a superficial multiculturalism that naively celebrates difference and reconciliation through the pleasures of food and eating. By focusing on multi-sited struggles across various spaces and times, the contributors to this anthology bring into focus the potent forces of class, racial, ethnic, sexual, and gender inequalities that pervade and persist in the production of Asian American culinary and alimentary practices, ideas, and images. This is the first collection to consider the fraught itineraries of Asian American immigrant histories and how they are inscribed in the production and dissemination of ideas about Asian American foodways.

Creative Destruction Tyler Cowen, 2009-01-10

A Frenchman rents a Hollywood movie. A Thai schoolgirl mimics Madonna. Saddam Hussein chooses Frank Sinatra's "My Way" as the theme song for his fifty-fourth birthday. It is a commonplace that globalization is subverting local culture. But is it helping as much as it hurts? In this strikingly original treatment of a fiercely debated issue, Tyler Cowen makes a bold new case for a more sympathetic understanding of cross-cultural trade. Creative Destruction brings not stale suppositions but an economist's eye to bear on an age-old question: Are market exchange and aesthetic quality friends or foes? On the whole, argues Cowen in clear and vigorous prose, they are friends. Cultural destruction breeds not artistic demise but diversity. Through an array of colorful examples from the areas where globalization's critics have been most vocal, Cowen asks what happens when cultures collide through trade: whether technology destroys native arts, why, and whether Hollywood movies rule the world; whether globalized culture is dumbing down societies everywhere; and if national cultures matter at all. Scrutinizing such manifestations of indigenous culture as the steel band ensembles of Trinidad, Indian handweaving, and music from Zaire, Cowen finds that they are more vibrant than ever, thanks largely to cross-cultural trade. For all the pressures that market forces exert on individual cultures, diversity typically increases within society even when cultures become more like each other. Trade enhances the range of individual choice, yielding forms of expression within cultures that flower as never before. While some see cultural decline as a half-empty glass, Cowen sees it as a glass half-full with the stirrings of cultural brilliance. Not all readers will agree, but all will want a say in the debate; this exceptional book will stir.

A Wealth of Thought Franz Boas, 1995

Essays on the development of Boas's theories on primitive art and his legacy in Northwest Coast art studies offer a theoretical framework for this collection of 14 articles written between 1889 and 1916 by the art historian and anthropologist. The articles in which he disputes Eurocentric art theories in his analysis of artworks by Northwest Coast Indians reveal his development as an art historian. The original black-and-white drawings are lovely.
