for as many years as I have. She has also served for many years as the first reader of almost all manuscripts I have written including the one for this book. I can always depend on her to tell me straight out what she thinks. When she found out I was writing this book she was afraid that the mass of detailed factual information I was gathering would be dull to read. Therefore when I actually started writing I laid aside all notes and just told the story in a way that flowed as freely as possible. I went back later to fill in the documentation and to correct factual errors that had crept in. When she looked over the first draft of the book her comment was: It is not as boring as I thought it would be. Her frankness is so dependable that I knew from these words that there was hope but that I had my work cut out for me in the revision process. By the middle of the second draft she grudgingly had to admit that she was getting hooked on the book and kept asking where the next chapter was.

Autobiography and the Psychological Study of Religious Lives Jacob Adrianus Belzen, 2008. This volume positions itself on the cutting edge of two fields in psychology that enjoy rapidly increasing attention: both the study of human lives and some core domains of such lives as religion and spirituality are high on the agenda of current research and teaching. Biographies and autobiographies are being approached in new ways and have become central to the study of human lives as an object of research and a preferred method for obtaining unique data about subjective human experiences. Ever since the beginning of the psychology of religion autobiographies have also been pointed out as an important source of information about psychic processes involved in religiosity. In this volume a number of leading theoreticians and researchers from Europe and the USA try to bring them back to this field by drawing on new insights and latest developments in psychological theory.
