In 1777 the North Carolina Committee of Safety ordered to "employ immediately all the Gunsmiths in the Colony in the making of Markers and Bayonets, of the size and manner recommended by Congress . . ." Surviving specimens are very rare and no North Carolina piece is presently known. This marker was made in Philadelphia. The barrel is marked "FRIEND COUNTY" and at the breech the C-P monogram pistol mark (albeit not in Committee of Safety monogram). The lock is marked "NICHOLSON" for John Nicholson. The bore is 68 caliber and the barrel length 44 inches.

Where that approach of the bicentennial of the American Revolution, increased interest in arms of the period has created an intense need for detailed studies on period armaments. Quite naturally, arms made in America during the Revolution are viewed with greater interest and excitement than are in the west demand, yet at the same time they have become undervalued as times in the light born of inadequate documentation. The American arms of the Revolutionary years does not always conform to well-defined patterns such as those followed in England and France during the period, and although general Commission of Safety drew up specifications for arms to be made under contract, these specifications were not always rigidly followed in Raw material scarcity, lack of machine, and other problems were responsible for this.

During the forty years preceding the Revolution, the military arm most familiar to the colonists was the so-called "Brown Bess" musket, the standard small-arm of the British Empire from the late 1720's until after the War of 1812. In England, and probably in the Colonies as well, this musket was referred to as the "long land pattern" musket, if it had the forty-six inch barrel, or the "short land pattern" musket, if it had the forty-two inch barrel. Today these pieces are commonly referred to as First and Second Model Brown Besses. The Second Model, forty-two inch barreled musket, began to be issued in quantity in the early 1760's, with certain superficial modifications to hardware. Eventually, the Second Model superseded the First Model.

but both were in use in America's Revolution. These two members of the large family of related carbons, bitumens, blunderbusses, and how the Regular Establishment of the eighteenth century.

When it became necessary for them to begin production of their own uniforms for war, they used the Brown Bess for a pattern. The pattern had been in use in the Netherlands and regularly for many French, Dutch, and German troops in the Colonies. It was then considered the most civilized citizens rather than rebels, as they adopted the Brown Bess. It tried and proven British arms were more known to use as a

The Brown Bess was a killing machine between men and elephants and was unquestionably the most successful handgun of the day, who was seven inches in height. But the Bess was the finest in the century, from the standard of manufacture and finish, and its polished wood added to the image of the English bayonet as the terror of Europe in the century, and with it a substantial military revolution.

The Brown Hen was of about 500 subjects, with forty-six birds housed in a smaller brooder to the 1

Cramer,2018-02-21 This provocative book debunks the myth that American gun culture was intentionally created by gun makers and demonstrates that gun ownership and use have been a core part of American society since our colonial origins Revisionist historians argue that American gun culture and manufacturing are relatively recent developments They further claim that widespread gun violence was largely absent from early American history because guns of all types and especially handguns were rare before 1848 According to these revisionists American gun culture was the creation of the first mass production gun manufacturers who used clever marketing to sell guns to people who neither wanted nor needed them However as proven in this first scholarly history of gun culture in early America gun ownership and use have in fact been central to American society from its very beginnings Lock Stock and Barrel The Origins of American Gun Culture shows that gunsmithing and gun manufacturing were important parts of the economies of the colonies and the early republic and explains how the American gun industry helped to create our modern world of precision mass production and high wages for workers      Artisans in the North Carolina Backcountry Johanna Miller Lewis,2014-07-15 During the quarter of a century before the thirteen colonies became a nation the northwest quadrant of North Carolina had just begun to attract permanent settlers This seemingly primitive area may not appear to be a likely source for attractive pottery and ornate silverware and furniture much less for an audience to appreciate these refinements Yet such crafts were not confined to urban centers and artisans like other colonists were striving to create better lives for themselves as well as to practice their trades As Johanna Miller Lewis shows in this pivotal study of colonial history and material culture the growing population of Rowan County required not only blacksmiths saddlers and tanners but also a great variety of skilled craftsmen to help raise the standard of living Rowan County s rapid expansion was in part the result of the planned settlements of the Moravian Church Because the Moravians maintained careful records historians have previously credited church artisans with greater skill and more economic awareness than non church craftsmen Through meticulous attention to court and private records deeds wills and other sources Lewis reveals the Moravian failure to keep up with the pace of development occurring elsewhere in the county Challenging the traditional belief that southern backcountry life was primitive Lewis shows that many artisans held public office and wielded power in the public sphere She also examines women weavers and spinsters as an integral part of the population All artisans Moravian and non Moravian male and female helped the local market economy expand to include coastal and trans Atlantic trade Lewis s book contributes meaningfully to the debate over self sufficiency and capitalism in rural America Carolina Folk McKissick Museum, Mckissick, 1985 Identifies the Carolinas contributions to Southern Folk traditions The Muzzleloader, 1982 Blood and War at My Doorstep Brenda Chambers McKean, 2011-03-22 Between these pages the reader will learn that North Carolina citizens did not idly stand by as their soldiers marched off to war The women worked themselves into patriotic exhaustion through Aid Societies Civilians with different means of support from the lower class to the plantation mistress wrote the governor complaining of hoarding speculation the tithe bushwhackers unionism conscription and exemptions Never before had so many died due to guerilla warfare Unknown before starving women with weapons stormed the merchant or warehouses in search for food Others turned to smuggling spying or nature s oldest profession Information from period newspapers as well as mostly unpublished letters tell their stories Armed America Clayton E.
