of the Native Races of South Africa Percival Robson Kirby, 1965 The Native Races of South Africa George William Stow, 1905 The author of this volume died before it was ready for the press The illustrations had most fortunately been carefully prepared and they are reproduced by chromolithography so that they are indistinguishable from the originals except that most of them have been reduced in size The manuscript was purchased by Miss Lucy C Lloyd from Mr Stow's widow with the intention of having it published but other work has prevented that lady from bestowing upon it the time and care needed for its arrangement In 1904 Miss Lloyd feeling that a work of such importance ought to be placed before the public without further delay did the author the honour of submitting the manuscript for the inspection and advice as to what should be done in the matter Miss Lloyd who is the greatest living authority upon the Bushmen attested the accuracy of much in Mr Stow's description of the customs and mode of life of those people though she doubted whether his division of that race into the two branches of painters and sculptors could be maintained thinking it probable that this matter was determined by locality and convenience The Musical Instruments of the Native Race of South Africa Percival
