The Emergence of African American Literacy Traditions Phyllis M. Belt-Beyan, 2004-10-30 The ways in which the African American community learned to be proficient readers and writers during the 19th century were diverse however the greatest impact on literacy acquisition came from family and community efforts African American arts churches benevolent societies newspapers literacy societies and formal and informal schools supported literacy growth and literacy growth in turn gave rise to national and international African American literacy traditions The underlying motivations that gave shape to the nature of their literacy behaviors and events within family and community contexts and within national and global context are examined in detail here The beginnings of African American literacy traditions would have failed had there not been intrinsic motivations opportunities and a need to use all of the language arts reading writing speaking listening and viewing to maintain and protect what mattered most to them as a people The institutionalization of these traditions into family and community rituals including songs prayers letters story telling and the like gave a visibility to the African American in ways no other cultural knowledge could Belt Beyan traces the development of these literacy traditions noting the parallel progression and transformation of Africans into African Americans slaves into freepersons and noncitizens into citizens

A Longitudinal Study of Dyslexia Hans-Jörgen Gjessing, Bjorn Karlsen, 2012-12-06 Psychological and educational researchers in the Scandinavian countries have cooperated in a research effort relating to children s learning disabilities for more than a decade Support has come from the federal governments and other funding agencies in Norway Sweden and Denmark through the Secretariat for Scandinavian Cultural Cooperation A number of independent studies have already been published dealing with various aspects of learning disabilities in the literacy skills of reading and writing The largest and most comprehensive study was the Bergen

Project a longitudinal study of an entire cohort of children with special emphasis on those who developed specific learning disabilities in reading and writing dyslexia These dyslexic children were studied diagnosed and treated over a period of nine years along with various control and comparison groups which included a large subgroup with general learning disabilities retarded The Bergen Project involved the collection of voluminous data The children were identified by means of special diagnostic tests and treated using remedial materials and techniques that had been developed to deal with various types of dyslexia The ophthalmology team not only tested the children but they also prescribed and provided glasses and even performed surgery when necessary The pediatric neurologists did general pediatric and neurological examinations following up many of the cases with EEGs and CT computerized tomography brain x rays Reading Research Quarterly , 1965
