Rethinking Linguistic Relativity:

Rethinking Linguistic Relativity John J. Gumperz, Stephen C. Levinson, 1996-07-11 Linguistic relativity is the claim that culture through language affects the way in which we think and especially our classification of the experienced world This book reexamines ideas about linguistic relativity in the light of new evidence and changes in theoretical climate The editors have provided a substantial introduction that summarizes changes in thinking about the Sapir Whorf hypothesis in the light of developments in anthropology linguistics and cognitive science Introductions to each section will be of especial use to students

Explorations in Linguistic Relativity Martin Pütz, Marjolyn Verspoor, 2000 About a century after the year Benjamin Lee Whorf 1897 1941 was born his theory complex is still the object of keen interest to linguists Recently scholars have argued that it was not his theory complex itself but an over simplified reduced section taken out of context that has become known as the Sapir Whorf hypothesis that has met with so much resistance among linguists over the last few decades Not only did Whorf present his views much more subtly than most people would believe but he also dealt with a great number of other issues in his work Taking Whorf s own notion of linguistic relativity as a starting point this volume explores the relation between language mind and experience through its historical development Whorf s own writing its misinterpretations various theoretical and methodological issues and a closer look at a few specific issues in his work

Hermeneutics, Linguistics, and the Bible Stanley E. Porter, 2024-01-25 The volume presents Stanley E Porter s considered thoughts and reflections on key questions of meaning and context addressing the problems of biblical interpretation and how a close collaboration between hermeneutics and linguistics can help to solve them The chapters display Porter s work in both fields examining how hermeneutics functions as a field in modern biblical studies and how the quest for meaning in biblical texts is underpinned by the study of linguistics The volume focuses on context for understanding the meanings of biblical texts Porter suggests that linguists can learn more from the philosophical questions around meaning that hermeneutics apply in their study of biblical texts and that there is more fruitful work to be done in the field of hermeneutics using insights from linguistics

Evidence for Linguistic Relativity Susanne Niemeier, René Dirven, 2000-04-15 This volume has arisen from the 26th International LAUD Symposium on Humboldt and Whorf Revisited Universal and Culture Specific Conceptualizations in Grammar and Lexis While contrasting two or more languages the papers in this volume either provide empirical evidence confirming hypotheses related to linguistic relativity or deal with methodological issues of empirical research These new approaches to Whorf s hypotheses do not focus on mere theorizing but provide more and more empirical evidence gathered over the last years They prove in a very sophisticated way that Whorf s ideas were very lucid ones even if Whorf s insights were framed in a terminology which lacked the flexibility of linguistic categories developed over the last quarter of this century especially in cognitive linguistics To date there is sufficient proof to claim that linguistic relativity is indeed a vital issue and the current volume confirms a more general trend for rehabilitating Whorf s theory complex and also offers evidence for it. It contains articles written by scholars from various fields of linguistics including phonology, psycholinguistics, language acquisition, historical linguistics, anthropological linguistics, and cross-cultural semantics, which all contribute to a re-evaluation and partial reformulation of Whorf's thinking. Language vs. Reality N. J. Enfield, 2024-03-05. A fascinating examination of how we are both played by language and made by language, the science underlying the bugs and features of humankind's greatest invention. Language is said to be humankind's greatest accomplishment. But what is language actually good for? It performs poorly at representing reality. It is a constant source of distraction, misdirection, and overshadowing. In fact, N. J. Enfield notes, language is far better at persuasion than it is at objectively capturing the facts of experience. Language cannot create or change physical reality, but it can do the next best thing: reframe and invert our view of the world. In Language vs. Reality, Enfield explains why language is bad for scientists who are bound by reality but good for lawyers who want to win their cases, why it can be dangerous when it falls into the wrong hands, and why it deserves our deepest respect. Enfield offers a lively exploration of the science underlying the bugs and features of language. He examines the tenuous relationship between language and reality, details the array of effects language has on our memory, attention, and reasoning, and describes how these varied effects power narratives and storytelling, as well as political spin and conspiracy theories. Why should we care what language is good for? Enfield, who has spent twenty years at the cutting edge of language research, argues that understanding how language works is crucial to tackling our most pressing challenges, including human cognitive bias, media spin, the post-truth problem, persuasion, the role of words in our thinking, and much more.

Linguistic Anthropology Alessandro Duranti, 1997-09-04. Alessandro Duranti introduces linguistic anthropology as an interdisciplinary field which studies language as a cultural resource and speaking as a cultural practice. The theories and methods of linguistic anthropology are introduced through a discussion of linguistic diversity, grammar in use, the role of speaking in social interaction, the organisation and meaning of conversational structures, and the notion of participation as a unit of analysis. Linguistic Anthropology will appeal to undergraduate and graduate students.

Language, Culture, and Communication Nancy Bonvillian, 2019-03-20. Language Culture and Communication Eighth Edition introduces students to the topics and theories of the broad field of linguistic anthropology by examining the multifaceted meanings and uses of language. It emphasizes the ways in which language encapsulates speakers' meanings and intentions. Through language structure and language use, speakers convey messages about their own identities, their understandings of the world, and their place in it. The book includes discussion of cultural and symbolic meanings conveyed by language and the social and political dimensions of language use. By using data, this book documents both similarities and differences in human language. New to this Edition: Introduction of the theme of intersectionalities and the theme of discourse and texts. Chapter 3: expansion of discussion on the re-examination of linguistic relativity. Chapter 5: expansion of discussion of how social stratification and racial differences can influence the way politeness is interpreted and the contextual expression.

Early Category and Concept Development David H. Rakison, Lisa M. Oakes, 2008-12-30 Whether or not infants' earliest perception of the world is a blooming buzzing confusion it is not long before they come to perceive structure and order among the objects and events around them At the core of this process and cognitive development in general is the ability to categorize to group events objects or properties together and to form mental representations or concepts that encapsulate the commonalities and structure of these categories Categorization is the primary means of coding experience underlying not only perceptual and reasoning processes but also inductive inference and language. The aim of this book is to bring together the most recent findings and theories about the origins and early development of categorization and conceptual abilities. Despite recent advances in our understanding of this area, a number of hotly debated issues remain at the center of the controversy over categorization. Researchers continue to ask questions such as: Which mechanisms for categorization are available at birth and which emerge later? What are the relative roles of perceptual similarity and nonobservable properties in early classification? What is the role of contextual variation in categorization by infants and children? Do different experimental procedures reveal the same kind of knowledge? Can computational models simulate infant and child categorization? How do computational models inform behavioral research? What is the impact of language on category development? How does language partition the world? This book is the first to address these and other key questions within a single volume. The authors present a diverse set of views representing cutting edge empirical and theoretical advances in the field. The result is a thorough review of empirical contributions to the literature and a wealth of fresh theoretical perspectives on early categorization.

Crosslinguistic Approaches to the Psychology of Language Jiansheng Guo, Elena Lieven, Nancy Budwig, Susan Ervin-Tripp, Keiko Nakamura, Seyda Ozcaliskan, 2010-10-18

This volume covers state of the art research in the field of crosslinguistic approaches to the psychology of language. The forty chapters cover a wide range of topics that represent the many research interests of a pioneer, Dan Isaac Slobin, who has been a major intellectual and creative force in the field of child language development. Linguistics and psycholinguistics for the past four decades. Slobin has insisted on a rigorous crosslinguistic approach in his attempt to identify universal developmental patterns in language learning to explore the effects of particular types of languages on psycholinguistic processes to determine the extent to which universals of language and language behavior are determined by modality: vocal auditory vs. manual visual and finally to investigate the relation between linguistic and cognitive processes. In this volume, researchers take up the challenge of the differences between languages to forward research in four major areas with which Slobin has been concerned throughout his career: language learning in crosslinguistic perspective; spoken and sign languages; the integration of language specific factors in narrative skill; theoretical issues in typology; language development and language change; and the relationship between language and cognition. All chapters are written by leading researchers currently working in these fields who are Slobin's colleagues, collaborators or former students in linguistics, psychology, anthropology and cognitive science. Each section starts with an introductory chapter that connects the themes of the chapters and reviews Slobin's contribution in the context of past research trends and future directions. The whole volume focuses squarely on the central argument: universals of human language and of its development are embodied and revealed in its diverse manifestations and utilization. Crosslinguistic Approaches to the Study of Language is a key resource for those interested in the range of differences between languages.

and how this impacts on learning cognition and language change and a tribute to Dan Slobin's momentous contribution to the field

Relatively Speaking Eve Danziger, 2001-04-12 Based upon 14 months of ethnographic fieldwork among the Mopan Maya in Belize Eve Danziger examines the semantic complexity of particular kinship terms used among Mopan women and children and shows that a culture specific analysis of their terms is superior to other non ethnographically based methods In doing so she contributes not only to theoretical semantics and the ethnography of that area but to the cross cultural study of child development and language acquisition

Words and the Mind Barbara Malt, Phillip Wolff, 2010-03-01 The study of word meanings promises important insights into the nature of the human mind by revealing what people find to be most cognitively significant in their experience However as we learn more about the semantics of various languages we are faced with an interesting problem Different languages seem to be telling us different stories about the mind For example important distinctions made in one language are not necessarily made in others What are we to make of these cross linguistic differences How do they arise Are they created by purely linguistic processes operating over the course of language evolution Or do they reflect fundamental differences in thought In this sea of differences are there any semantic universals Which categories might be given by the genes which by culture and which by language And what might the cross linguistic similarities and differences contribute to our understanding of conceptual and linguistic development The kinds of mapping principles structures and processes that link language and non linguistic knowledge must accommodate not just one language but the rich diversity that has been uncovered The integration of knowledge and methodologies necessary for real progress in answering these questions has happened only recently as experimental approaches have been applied to the cross linguistic study of word meaning In Words and the Mind Barbara Malt and Phillip Wolff present evidence from the leading researchers who are carrying out this empirical work on topics as diverse as spatial relations events emotion terms motion events objects body part terms causation color categories and relational categories By bringing them together Malt and Wolff highlight some of the most exciting cross linguistic and cross cultural work on the language thought interface from a broad array of fields including linguistics anthropology cognitive and developmental psychology and cognitive neuropsychology Their results provide some answers to these questions and new perspectives on the issues surrounding them
