Taylor, 2022-06-23 This volume reports on a series of fieldwork projects carried out in the Tregurra Valley to the east of Truro Cornwall between 2009 2015 The fieldwork led to the identification of a large number of pits and hearths across the site the majority of which that have proved dateable spanning the Early Neolithic to the end of the Early Bronze Age

Living with the Flood Samantha Paul, Kevin Colls, Henry Chapman, 2015-11-30 The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more transitory activity as the riparian landscape in a wooded setting became a wetland within a more openly grazed environment The presence of potential built structures dating to the early Neolithic the early Bronze Age and the early Anglo Saxon periods provides some sense of continuity although the nature of these structures and the environmental context within which they were constructed was very different The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more transitory activity as the riparian landscape in a wooded setting became a wetland within a more openly grazed environment The presence of potential built structures dating to the early Neolithic the early Bronze Age and the early Anglo Saxon periods provides some sense of continuity although the nature of these structures and the environmental context within which they were constructed was very different The site at Mill Lane Sawston represents millennia of human activity within a dynamic and changing landscape setting River valleys have been a focus for human activity since the early Holocene and in addition to providing abundant archaeological evidence for this activity the proximity to water also highlights the potential for the preservation of both archaeological remains and palaeoenvironmental source material However human activity within river valleys also commonly bridges areas of both wetland and dryland ecological zones which are often approached using quite different archaeological methods and which present considerable differences in levels of archaeological visibility and preservation The site at Mill Lane offered an uncommon opportunity to explore the interface between these two types of environment Here we present the results of the study of a wetland dryland interface on the edge of palaeochannels of the River Cam in Cambridgeshire Through the integrated archaeological and palaeoenvironmental analysis of a site on the western edge of Sawston a detailed picture of life on the edge of the floodplain from the late glacial to the post medieval periods has been developed At the heart of this is the relationship between people and their changing environment which reveals a shifting pattern of ritual occupation and more transitory activity as the riparian landscape in a wooded setting became a wetland within a more openly grazed environment The presence of potential built structures dating to the early Neolithic the early Bronze Age and the early Anglo Saxon periods provides some sense of continuity although the nature of these structures and the environmental context within which they were constructed was very different The Peopling of Britain Paul Slack,Ryk Ward,2002-03-07 This volume reviews the way in which over the centuries the evolving human presence in Britain has shaped the British landscape and how in turn the British landscape has moulded the development of British communities From the beginnings of human settlement Britain has represented a final frontier for successive waves of colonists each bringing its own set of cultural adaptations and its own ethos into the landscape Over time both landscape and culture have matured from raw frontier to settled centre moulded by the advent of agriculture towns and industry and by streams of migration both within Britain and from outside The chapters in this book by archaeologists historians and geographers present an interdisciplinary and accessible account of that long process Together they trace the various phases of the story showing how much of it has only recently been unearthed and how much remains to be discovered

Postcolonial Justice Anke Bartels,Lars Eckstein,Nicole Waller,Dirk Wiemann,2017-02-13 Postcolonial Justice addresses a major issue in current postcolonial theory and beyond namely the question of how to reconcile an ethics grounded in the reciprocal acknowledgment of diversity and difference with the normative if not universal thrust that appears to energize any notion of justice The concept of postcolonial justice shared by the essays in this volume carries an unwavering commitment to difference within and beyond Europe while equally rejecting radical cultural essentialisms which refuse to engage in utopian ideals of convivial exchange across a plurality of subject positions Such utopian ideals can no longer claim universal validity as in the tradition of the European enlightenment instead they are bound to local frames of speaking from which they project world

Time, Culture and Identity Julian Thomas,2002-01-31 Time Culture and Identity questions the modern western distinctions between nature and culture mind and body object and subject Drawing on the philosophy of Martin Heidegger Julian Thomas develops a way of writing about the past in which time is seen as central to the emergence of the identities of people and objects

Continental Connections Hugo Anderson-Whymark, Duncan Garrow, Fraser Sturt, 2015-02-26 The prehistories of Britain and Ireland are inescapably entwined with continental European narratives The central aim here is to explore cross channel relationships throughout later prehistory investigating the archaeological links material social cultural between the areas we now call Britain and Ireland and continental Europe from the Mesolithic through to the end of the Iron Age Since the separation from the European mainland of Ireland c 16 000 BC and Britain c 6000 BC their island nature has been seen as central to many aspects of life within them helping to define their senses of identity and forming a crucial part of their neighbourly relationship with continental Europe and with each other However it is important to remember that the surrounding seaways have often served to connect as well as to separate these islands from the continent In approaching the subject of continental connections in the long term and by bringing a variety of different archaeological perspectives associated with different periods to bear on it this volume provides a new a new synthesis of the ebbs and flows of the cross channel relationship over the course of 15 000 years of later prehistory enabling fresh understandings and new insights to emerge about the intimately linked trajectories of change in both regions

The Archaeology of Plural and Changing Identities Eleanor Casella,Chris Fowler,2005-12-05 As people move through life they continually shift affiliation from one position to another dependent on the wider contexts of their interactions Different forms of material culture may be employed as affiliations shift and the connotations of any given set of artifacts may change In this volume the authors explore these overlapping spheres of social affiliation Social actors belong to multiple identity groups at any moment in their life It is possible to deploy one or many potential labels in describing the identities of such an actor Two main axes exist upon which we can plot experiences of social belonging the synchronic and the diachronic Identities can be understood as multiple during one moment or the extended moment of brief interaction over the span of a lifetime or over a specific historical trajectory From the Introduction The international contributions each illuminate how the various identifiers of race ethnicity sexuality age class gender personhood health and or religion are part of both material expressions of social affiliations and transient experiences of identity The Archaeology of Plural and Changing Identities Beyond Identification will be of great interest to archaeologists anthropologists historians curators and other social scientists interested in the mutability of identification through material remains Europe's First Farmers T. Douglas Price,2000-09-14 Essays by leading specialists on a central issue of European history the transition to farming Interpretative Archaeology Christopher Tilley,2020-05-26 This fascinating volume integrates recent developments in anthropological and sociological theory with a series of detailed studies of prehistoric material culture The authors explore the manner in which semiotic hermeneutic Marxist and post structuralist approaches radically alter our understanding of the past and provide a series of innovative studies of key areas of interest to archaeologists and anthropologists Archaeology After Interpretation Benjamin Alberti,Andrew Meirion Jones,Joshua Pollard,2016-06-16 A new generation of archaeologists has thrown down a challenge to post processual theory arguing that characterizing material symbols as arbitrary overlooks the material character and significance of artifacts This volume showcases the significant departure from previous symbolic approaches that is underway in the discipline It brings together key scholars advancing a variety of cutting edge approaches each emphasizing an understanding of artifacts and materials not in terms of symbols but relationally as a set of associations that compose people s understanding of the world Authors draw on a diversity of intellectual sources and case studies paving a dynamic road ahead for archaeology as a discipline and theoretical approaches to material culture How We Became Human Pierpaolo Antonello,Paul Gifford,2015-10-01 From his groundbreaking Violence and the Sacred and Things Hidden since the Foundation of the World Ren Girard s mimetic theory is presented as elucidating the origins of culture He posits that archaic religion or the sacred particularly in its dynamics of sacrifice and ritual is a neglected and major key to unlocking the enigma of how we became human French philosopher of science Michel Serres states that Girard s theory provides a Darwinian theory of culture because it proposes a dynamic shows an evolution and gives a universal explanation This major claim has however remained underscrutinized by scholars working on Girard s theory and it is mostly overlooked within the natural and social sciences Joining disciplinary worlds this book aims to explore this ambitious claim invoking viewpoints as diverse as evolutionary culture theory cultural anthropology archaeology cognitive psychology ethology and philosophy The contributors provide major evidence in favor of Girard s hypothesis Equally Girard s theory is presented as having the potential to become for the human and social sciences something akin to the integrating framework that present day biological science owes to Darwin something compatible with it and complementary to it in accounting for the still remarkably little understood phenomenon of human emergence      The Archaeology of Britain John Hunter,Ian Ralston,1999 A comprehensive and up to date introduction to all the archaeological periods covering Britain from early prehistory to the industrial revolution It provides a one stop textbook for the entire archaeology of Britain      Economic Zooarchaeology Peter Rowley-Conwy,Dale Serjeantson,Paul Halstead,2017-05-31 Economic archaeology is the study of how past peoples exploited animals and plants using as evidence the remains of those animals and plants The animal side is usually termed zooarchaeology the plant side archaeobotany What distinguishes them from other studies of ancient animals and plants is that their ultimate aim is to find out about human behaviour the animal and plant remains are a means to this end The 33 papers present a wide array of topics covering many areas of archaeological interest Aspects of method and theory animal bone identification human palaeopathology prehistoric animal utilisation in South America and the study of dog cemeteries are covered The long running controversy over the milking of animals and the use of dairy products by humans is discussed as is the ecological impact of hunting by farmers with studies from Serbia and Syria For Britain coverage extends from Mesolithic Star Carr via the origins of agriculture and the farmers of Lismore Fields through considerations of the Neolithic and Bronze Age Outside Britain papers discuss Neolithic subsistence in Cyprus and Croatia Iron Age society in Spain Medieval and post medieval animal utilisation in northern Russia and the claimed finding of a modern red deer skeleton in Egypt s Eastern Desert In exploring these themes this volume celebrates the life and work of Tony Legge zoo archaeologist and teacher      Contested Landscapes Barbara Bender,Margot Winer,2020-05-27 Landscapes are not just backdrops to human action people make them and are made by them How people understand and engage with their material world depends upon particularities of time and place These understandings are dynamic variable contradictory and open ended Landscapes are thus always evolving and are often volatile and contested They are also always on the move people may or may not be rooted but they have legs From prehistoric times onwards people have travelled but the process of people on the move as tourists or on global business as migrant workers or political or economic refugees has vastly accelerated How and why do people who share the same landscape have different and often violently opposed ways of understanding its significance How do people on the move make sense of the unfamiliar How do they create a sense of place How do they rework the memories of places left behind There is nothing easeful about the landscapes discussed in this book which are often harsh edged and troubled both socially and politically The contributors tackle contested notions of landscape to explain the key role it plays in creating identity and shaping human behaviour This landmark study offers an important contribution towards an understanding of the complexity of landscape
