Knowing your potential customers defines the Total Addressable Market (TAM) for your business.

Your market analysis takes account of the limitations of your planned business.

These can include factors such as geography, availability of key resources, channels to market and ability to scale.

Analysing the TAM against your business model choices will lead you to your Serviceable Addressable Market (SAM).

Finally, you may choose initially to go after a subset of your SAM, this subset is called your Target Market.

The TAM can be very large if your product is aimed at a very common problem such as this example from PinMyPet.
