To Look Like America Katherine C. Naff, 2018-03-05 To Look Like America is designed to contribute a unique perspective to those interested in the challenges presented to public sector organizations particularly in the federal sector by an increasingly diverse workforce Current projections are that the American workforce will become more and more diverse over the next decade forcing employers to respond to real or perceived barriers to the participation and advancement of women and minorities in their organizations This book provides a means for identifying and taking steps to dismantle such barriers It shows how empirical measures can identify the extent to which such barriers exist The measures are applied to a broad cross section of the federal civil service through the use of employment focus group and interview data as well as responses to surveys administered to representative samples of federal employees The analysis examines the consequences that result when barriers are left unaddressed and concludes with an assessment of interventions that can be effective in dismantling barriers and promoting true participation

Diversity's Promise for Higher Education Daryl G. Smith, 2020-08-11 Building sustainable diversity in higher education isn't just the right thing to do it is an imperative for institutional excellence and for a pluralistic society that works Updated Edition Daryl G. Smith has devoted her career to studying and fostering diversity in higher education In Diversity's Promise for Higher Education Smith brings together research from a wide variety of fields to propose a set of clear and realistic practices that will help colleges and universities locate diversity as a strategic imperative and pursue diversity efforts that are inclusive of the varied and growing issues apparent on campuses without losing focus on the critical unfinished business of the past To become more relevant to society the nation and the world while remaining true to their core missions colleges and universities must continue to see diversity like technology as central not parallel to their work Indeed looking at the relatively slow progress for change in many areas Smith suggests that seeing diversity as an imperative for an institution's individual mission and not just as a value is the necessary lever for real institutional change Furthermore achieving excellence in a diverse society requires increasing institutional capacity for diversity working to understand how diversity is tied to better leadership positive change research in virtually every field student success accountability and more equitable hiring practices In this edition which is aimed at

Designing for Diversity Kathryn H. Anthony, 2021-08-18 A powerful statement about the repercussions of discrimination and the benefits of diversity in architecture Providing hard data for trends that many perceive only vaguely and some deny altogether Designing for Diversity reveals a profession rife with gender and racial discrimination and examines the aspects of architectural practice that hinder or support the full participation of women and persons of color Drawing on interviews and surveys of hundreds of architects Kathryn H Anthony outlines some of the forms of discrimination that recur most frequently in architecture being offered added responsibility without a commensurate rise in position salary or credit not being allowed to engage in client contact field experience or construction supervision and being confined to certain kinds of positions typically interior design for women government work for African Americans and computer aided design for Asian American architects Anthony discusses the profession s attitude toward flexible schedules part time contracts and the demands of family and identifies strategies that have helped underrepresented individuals advance in the profession especially establishing a strong relationship with a mentor She also observes a strong tendency for underrepresented architects to leave mainstream practice either establishing their own firms going into government or corporate work or abandoning the field altogether Given the traditional mismatch between diverse consumers and predominantly white male producers of the built environment plus the shifting population balance toward communities of color Anthony contends that the architectural profession staves off true diversity at its own peril Designing for Diversity argues convincingly that improving the climate for nontraditional architects will do much to strengthen architecture as a profession Practicing architects managers of firms and educators will learn how to create conditions more welcoming to a diversity of users as well as designers of the built environment
