Cohen, 2020-04-08 Until recently the prevailing view of marine life at high latitudes has been that organisms enter a general resting state during the dark Polar Night and that the system only awakens with the return of the sun Recent research however with coordinated multidisciplinary field campaigns based on the high Arctic Archipelago of Svalbard have provided a radical new perspective Instead of a system in dormancy a new perspective of a system in full operation and with high levels of activity across all major phyla is emerging Examples of such activities and processes include Active marine organisms at sea surface water column and the sea floor At surface we find active foraging in seabirds and fish in the water column we find a high biodiversity and activity of zooplankton and larvae such as active light induced synchronized diurnal vertical migration and at seafloor there is a high biodiversity in benthic animals and macroalgae The Polar Night is a period for reproduction in many benthic and pelagic taxa mass occurrence of ghost shrimps

Caprellides high abundance of Ctenophores physiological evidence of micro and macroalgal cells that are ready to utilize the first rays of light when they appear deep water fishes found at water surface in the Polar night and continuous growth of bivalves throughout the winter These findings not only begin to shape a new paradigm for marine winter ecology in the high Arctic but also provide conclusive evidence for a top down controlled system in which primary production levels are close to zero In an era of environmental change that is accelerated at high latitudes we believe that this new insight is likely to strongly impact how the scientific community views the high latitude marine ecosystem Despite the overwhelming darkness the main environmental variable affecting marine organisms in the Polar Night is in fact light The light regime during the Polar Night is unique with respect to light intensity spectral composition of light and photoperiod Journal of a Voyage to Greenland, in the Year 1821 George William Manby, 1822 Account of the Ship Baffin s Voyage with Captain Scoresby The main purpose of the voyage was to test a new harpoon design by Scoresby The voyage took them first to Spitzbergen along the coast of Greenland to Iceland and then home The Commercial & Financial Chronicle and Hunt's Merchants' Magazine ,1879 A Collection of Voyages and Travels, Some Now First Printed from Original Manuscripts, Others Now First Published in English: Voyages and travels into Brasil and the East-Indies ,1744
