Self-Regulation Theory Dennis Mithaug, 1993-02-28 The author's Self Regulation Theory explains how people optimize their adjustments in order to maximize their gains toward getting what they want from their environments. It describes the reciprocal effects of human adjustment and environmental change. The interaction among what regulators expect, how they choose, and what they do affects and is affected by optimal and suboptimal environmental contingencies. Although Self Regulation Theory is consistent with current behavioral cognitive and cognitive behavioral models of adjustment, it goes beyond them by describing the problem solving and solution doing mechanisms that lead to optimal adjustments and maximal gains. This permits the theory to predict precise relationships between self regulated gain towards goal attainment and the consequences of goal attainment. Although the conclusions do not contradict generally accepted views, they challenge current perspectives on how to define and analyze the problem of adaptation. By separating the mechanism of self regulation from the environmental effect it produces, we can examine the unique contribution of the self regulating system to its own success or failure. Also, by defining environmental optimalities from the perspective of the regulator, we can assess how the same menu of environmental opportunities changes from being suboptimal to optimal as a function of the regulator's success in adjusting.

Philosophy and an African Culture Kwasi Wiredu, 1980-04-10 What can philosophy contribute to African culture? What can it draw from it? Could there be a truly African philosophy that goes beyond traditional folk thought? Kwasi Wiredu tries in these essays to define and demonstrate a role for contemporary African philosophers which is distinctive but by no means parochial. He shows how they can assimilate the advances of analytical philosophy and apply them to the general social and intellectual changes associated with modernisation and the transition to new national identities. But we see too how they can exploit traditional resources and test the assumptions of Western philosophy against the intimations of their own language and culture. The volume as a whole presents some of the best non technical work of a distinguished African philosopher of importance equally to professional philosophers and to those with a more general interest in contemporary African thought and culture.
