Blood Ties and Fictive Ties Kristin Elizabeth Gager, 2014-07-14 In Paris during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the practice of adopting children was strongly discouraged by cultural religious and legal authorities on the grounds that it disrupted family blood lines In fact historians have assumed that adoption had generally not been practiced in France or in the rest of Europe since late antiquity Challenging this view Kristin Gager brings to light evidence showing how married couples and single men and women from the artisan neighborhoods in early modern Paris did manage to adopt children as their legal heirs In so doing she offers a new richly detailed portrait of family life civil law and public assistance in Paris and reveals how citizens forged a wide variety of family forms in defiance of social cultural and legal norms Gager bases her work on documents ranging from previously unexplored notarized contracts of adoption to court cases theological treatises and literary texts She examines two main patterns of adoption those privately arranged between households and those of destitute children from the Parisian foundling hospice and the H tel Dieu Gager argues that although customary law rejected adoption and promoted an exclusively biological model of the family there existed an alternative domestic culture based on a variety of fictive ties Gager connects her arguments to current debates about adoption and the nature of the family in Europe and the United States Originally published in 1996 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905
