Reading Ads Socially:

Reading Ads Socially Robert Goldman, 1992 Reading Ads Socially argues that advertisements are an ideal site for observing how the logic of the commodity form expresses itself culturally and socially. The aim is to produce a study of visual ideology which will move students to consider the deep ideological structure of ads. The fixation on whether ads are deceptive or subliminal diverts us from the real material and ideological impact of ads in modern society. The material impact of ads lies in producing and reproducing a currency of sign values that can be joined to commodities. Ideologically the number of ads that we process numbs us into an acceptance of the social logic imposed by the framework of the commodity form. It is here that mystification takes place and here that we are encouraged to embrace reified social logic as if it were natural. Robert Goldman examines how advertisements frame meanings and how these frames help to organize the ways we see the world. By dissecting these frames, advertisements can be made to locate the meaning of hegemony in relation to commodity culture. The book shows how ads modify meaning. It tracks the cultural contradictions of consumer advertising and examines ad campaigns which attempt to distance themselves from the rhetoric of the commodity self, pseudo individuality and commodity fetishism. Original, powerfully argued and full of illuminating examples, this book will fast become a benchmark in the study of advertising culture.

Reading Ads Socially Robert Goldman, 2005-07-25 This systematic and authoritative book provides an unrivalled guide to understanding ad culture. It shows how the logic of commodities permeates the ways we think about ourselves, our relationships and our desires. Richly illustrated and written with great clarity, it will be essential reading for anyone interested in ad culture.

Reading Ads Socially, 1992      Reading Ads Socially Robert Goldman, 2005      The Dynamics of Advertising Barry Richards, Jackie Botterill, Iain MacRury, 2000. Scholars of human relations, psycho-social studies and communications review the extensive literature on advertising in sociology and cultural studies, report the results of a study they did at the University of East London on changes in advertising over the past half century and develop a method for the psycho-social study of all forms of public communication and of other aspects of daily life. They argue that advertising is far more closely linked to the pragmatics of everyday life than their symbolic richness might suggest. c Book News Inc.

Creative Advertising Concept and Copy Georgia-Zozeta Miliopoulou, 2024-04-08. Considering perspectives on creative advertising through a unique media and communications lens, this book encompasses both the theory and practical tools needed to approach and understand creativity in advertising with an original eye. Drawing from diverse subject areas including Social Anthropology, Narrative Theory, Consumer Psychology, Semiotics and Cultural Studies, Creative Advertising Concept and Copy provides a solid grounding in advertising education away from the traditional business and marketing literature. Notwithstanding the need for independent inspiration and originality, the author guides readers through the entire process of campaign planning, moving from strategy to creative idea to finished piece, whilst employing concepts and principles relevant to design thinking. Taking into account ethics and regulations, the use of text and images and storytelling across radio TV and video platforms readers will come to a holistic understanding of what advertising can and cannot do and how to achieve the best results Written for students involved in creative advertising as an area of academic research and professional practice this book will also be of interest to early career advertising professionals seeking a fresh perspective on their work
