Service user involvement in research can range from the extremes of being the subject to being the initiator or investigator of a research study. This broad scope of levels of involvement is reflected in the contributions in this book both in the research experiences reported and in the writing of the chapters themselves. With contributions coming from a range of service areas including learning disabilities, cancer care, older people, and mental illness, chapters look at important research issues such as strategies for working in true partnership, avoiding tokenism, involving service users at all stages of the research process, communication and terminology involving service users of different ages and experience, training needs of professionals and service users, problems surrounding payment for service users, other ethical and practical issues.
