Researching Children's Experiences:

Researching Children's Experience Sheila Greene, Diane Hogan, 2005-01-13 Strongly recommended as it provides a very useful overview of a range of methods mainly textual for exploring children's experiences. These accounts are placed well in the broader conceptual frameworks concerning both methodologies and ethical considerations. Educational Review. How should the researcher approach the sensitive subject of the child? What are the ethical issues involved in researching children's experiences? In essays written by a collection of key international authors, Researching Children's Experience addresses these questions and examines up-to-date methodological and conceptual approaches to researching children. This book is a practical, comprehensive and interdisciplinary guide for advanced students and researchers exploring a range of studies and the theoretical and ethical motivations behind them. The book is divided into three coherent sections: Conceptual, methodological and ethical issues in researching children's experiences; Methods for conducting research with children; The generation and analysis of text. Researching Children's Experience provides examples of how researchers from a variety of social science perspectives have set about carrying out research into children's experience. Useful to students embarking on a research project and to experienced researchers wishing to explore new methods. Greene and Hogan's book is an essential addition to anyone doing research on children. It will be especially useful to those in developmental psychology, education, nursing and other disciplines interested in studying children's experience. Researching Children's Experiences Melissa Freeman, Sandra Mathison, 2009 This accessible book presents approaches to planning, carrying out and analyzing research projects with children and youth from a social constructivist perspective. Rich contextualized examples illustrate how to elicit and understand the lived experiences of diverse young people. Data collection methods discussed in depth include drawing, photography, the Internet, games, interviewing, focus groups, journaling and observation. Also covered are strategies for fostering the active contributions of children in the research process, navigating consent and ethical issues, enlisting the support of parents, school personnel and other gatekeepers and interpreting data. Throughout, the authors emphasize the need to attend to the social setting in which research with children is done. End-of-chapter questions and exercises encourage readers to reflect on taken-for-granted conceptions of children and childhood and to try out the book's ideas in their own research projects. Researching Children's Experience Sheila Greene, Diane Hogan, 2005-02-09 How should the researcher approach the sensitive subject of the child? What are the ethical issues involved with researching children's experiences? The essays in this text address these questions and examine up-to-date methodological and conceptual approaches to researching children. OCLC Researching Children's Experiences, 1998 Doing Children's Geographies Lorraine van Blerk, Mike Kesby, 2013-10-31 Doing Children's Geographies provides a useful resource for all those embarking on research with young people. Drawing on reflections from original cutting-edge research undertaken across three continents, the book focuses on the challenges researchers face when working with children, youth and their families. The book is divided into three sections.

The first section provides alternatives to some of the difficulties researchers face and highlights methodological innovations as geographers uncover new and exciting ways of working. The second part specifically addresses the issues surrounding children and youth's participation providing critiques of current practice and offering alternatives for increasing young people's involvement in research design. Finally the book broadens to a consideration of wider areas of concern for those working with children and youth. This section discusses the nature of childhood in relation to research the place of emotions in research with young people and the process of undertaking applied research. This book was previously published as a special issue of Children's Geographies. Multidisciplinary Approaches to Educational Research Sadaf

Rizvi, 2013-06-17 This book provides an original perspective on a range of controversial issues in educational and social research through case studies of multi disciplinary and mixed method research involving children teachers schools and communities in Europe and the developing world. These case studies from researchers across continents and across disciplines explore a range of interesting issues including the relevance of research approaches to very different national settings and to the kinds of questions being asked the barriers of language and culture between researcher and researched articulating the thinking and feelings of very young children the challenges of dealing with partiality of data issues of identity subjectivity and reflexivity and transferring research approaches from one national setting to the problems posed in another.
