Treating specially of our medicinal plants and of the best substitutes for foreign articles of vegetable origin my aim has been to spare no exertions compatible with the limits assigned me to make it applicable as well to the requirements of the Surgeon as of the Planter and Farmer and I trust that after the war shall have ceased there will still be no diminution in the desire of every one to possess a source from whence his curiosity may be satisfied on matters pertaining to our useful plants. The Regimental Surgeon in the field the Physician in his private practice or the Planter on his estate may themselves collect and apply these substances within their reach which are frequently quite as valuable as others obtained from abroad and either impossible to be procured or scarce and costly. But information scattered through a variety of sources must needs be first collected to be available in any practical point of view I have therefore inserted whatever I thought would throw light upon the vegetable productions of the Confederate States.
