The Punishment Response Graeme Newman, 2017-07-28 Punishment occupies a central place in our lives and attitudes We suffer a profound ambivalence about its moral consequences Persons who have been punished or are liable to be punished have long objected to the legitimacy of punishment We are all objects of punishment yet we are also its users Our ambivalence is so profound that not only do we punish others but we punish ourselves as well We view those who submit too willingly to punishment as obedient verging on the groveling coward and we view those who resist punishment as disobedient rebels In The Punishment Response Graeme Newman describes the uses of punishment and how these uses change over time Some argue that punishment promotes discrimination and divisiveness in society Others claim that it is through punishment that order and legitimacy are upheld It is important that punishment is understood as neither one nor the other it is both This point simple though it seems has never really been addressed This is why Newman claims we wax and wane in our uses of punishment why punishing institutions are clogged by bureaucracy why the death penalty comes and goes like the tide Graeme Newman emphasizes that punishment is a cultural process and also a mechanism of particular institutions of which criminal law is but one Because academic discussions of punishment have been confined to legalistic preoccupations much of the policy and justification of punishment have been based on discussions of extreme cases The use of punishment in the sphere of crime is an extreme unto itself since crime is a minor aspect of daily life The uses of punishment and the moral justifications for punishment within the family and school have rarely been considered certainly not to the exhaustive extent that criminal law has been in this outstanding work

The Human Factor of Cybercrime Rutger Leukfeldt, Thomas J. Holt, 2019-10-11 Cybercrimes are often viewed as technical offenses that require technical solutions such as antivirus programs or automated intrusion detection tools. However, these crimes are committed by individuals or networks of people which prey upon human victims and are detected and prosecuted by criminal justice personnel. As a result, human decision making plays a substantial role in the course of an offence; the justice response and policymakers attempt to legislate against these crimes. This book focuses on the human factor in cybercrime: its offenders, victims, and parties involved in tackling cybercrime. The distinct nature of cybercrime has consequences for the entire spectrum of crime and raises myriad questions about the nature of offending and victimization. For example, are cybercriminals the same as traditional offenders, or are there new offender types with distinct characteristics and motives? What foreground and situational characteristics influence the decision making process of offenders? Which personal and situational characteristics provide an increased or decreased risk of cybercrime victimization? This book brings together leading criminologists from around the world to consider these questions and examine all facets of victimization, offending, offender networks, and policy responses.
