Sloan, 2012-02-02 The striking increase in average life expectancy during the twentieth century rates as one of the major events of our time We are in the midst of a social revolution one rooted not in a new ideology but in our changing population patterns For the first time in human history infants in fortunate nations like ours can expect to live well into their seventies and beyond This demographic revolution increases pressure on resources as it also creates further social change and new opportunities for older persons Such rapid changes have left most people living in the past with their generally negative attitudes about aging and elderly people The same outmoded beliefs are embedded in many of our health care programs In our youth oriented culture most of us still view old people as physically decrepit or in rapid inevitable decline Mentally they are viewed as forgetful or childish with little ability to learn and adapt Socially and economically they are often considered a burden With such stereotypes where is the expectation and encouragement for their continuing capacity to enrich their own lives and to enrich society These deep seated cultural stereotypes do not describe accurately the new wave of elderly persons or their potential contributions to society Today's aging individuals are mostly far from decrepit fewer than 25 percent experience any disability and fewer than 5 percent are in nursing homes Intellectually given new opportunities to learn and grow they thrive

Nursing Home Administration James Elmore Allen, 2007 Contains the knowledge essential to prepare for licensure and employment as a nursing home administrator Using as its basis the guidelines of the National Association of Boards of Examiners of Nursing Home Administrators this work includes sections on Distinguishing delirium from dementia Psychosis from agitation GERD and Glycemic control
