Foundations of Sport-Related Brain Injuries Semyon M. Slobounov, Wayne J. Sebastianelli, 2006-08-25 This book is the partial product of a conference on concussion in athletics held at the Pennsylvania State University April 29-30 2004 For a number of reasons it seemed timely to hold such a conference as well as to condense our current understanding of mechanisms predispositions and latest developments in evaluation and managements of sport related concussions in a single book format Despite dramatic advances in medicine traumatic brain injury commonly know as concussion is still one of the most puzzling and least understood injuries facing the sport medicine world today There still no universal agreement assigning the level of severity the sport related concussions nor there is any treatment besides the passage of time Medicines inability to fully understanding concussion has led us to question when it is truly safe to return an athlete to full sport participation so threat for risk of re injury is minimized The need for a multidisciplinary approach to understanding the sport related concussions stem from recent evidence that there are long lasting residual behavioral psycho social and neural disabilities that are often overlooked using current research methods The notion of transient and rapid symptoms resolution is misleading since symptoms resolution is frequently not indicative of injury resolution There are no two traumatic brain injuries alike in mechanism symptomology or symptoms resolution Most grading scales are based on loss of consciousness and post traumatic amnesia both of which occur infrequently in sport related mild traumatic brain injuries been made to assure teaching and learning quality by designing standardized curricula and giving standardized tests. However, it is questionable whether standardized tests could capture the diverse aptitudes and skills students with different cultural experiences bring to the classroom. It is also questionable whether a standardized curriculum would lead to positive learning outcomes for all. In 1998, we convened a conference in the University of Hong Kong and invited experts from different parts of the globe to discuss how to apply psychology to enhance learning and teaching quality. Probably because of the cultural diversity of the conference participants, multicultural education emerged as one of the dominant themes in the conference. For example, in the Opening Address, Robert Sternberg argued for the importance of cultural sensitivity in ability testing. In another keynote address, Martin Maehr discussed the implications of motivation research for designing an optimal achievement environment for culturally diverse students. Professor Sternberg's paper is included in this volume, and Professor Maehr's article was published in a previous volume we edited, Student Motivation: The Culture and Context of Learning (Plenum, 2001). The contributors of this volume include psychologists and education researchers from Africa, Asia, Australia, and North America, and some of them have extensive experiences in multicultural education. Despite their diverse cultural and professional backgrounds, the contributors agree that to meet the challenges posed by cultural diversity, educators need to have the sensitivity to the multiplicity of student abilities in aptitude and achievement assessment.
