

Importance of Political Thought

"The study of political thought, therefore has practical value in that, it aids the formation of habits of more thorough and candid examination of the meaning and tendency of our political understanding," claims Gettel. Since the founding of the state, political thought has always held a significant position, but due to current international conditions, it now holds a very honourable position. Political thought is particularly crucial today, when social evolution is progressing rapidly. A careful examination of political thought throughout history can help with the task of comprehending the deeper implications of the current situation and the future planning. Studying political thought from a historical perspective honed the mind's ability to analyse, critique, and build. It promotes mature thinking and makes it possible for politicians to more effectively address current issues.

This demonstrates the significance of scientific political thought in directing the revolution and formulating its tactics. Revolutionary political thought is not a mental luxury, an intellectual pastime for the educated, or an abstract idea hanging in a vacuum that we can, if we so choose, disregard as an unnecessary luxury. Scientific revolutionary thought is clear thinking that enables the masses to comprehend their adversary, his areas of strength or weakness, and the forces that support and allies themselves to the adversary. Similarly, the general populace needs to comprehend the forces that are driving the revolution. How to mobilise, how to undermine the enemy's strong points and exploit its weaknesses, and what organisational, mobilisation, political, and military programmes can be used to build up their forces until they can subdue the opposition and win the war.

It is this revolutionary political thought that explains to the vast majority of our people the reasons why their previous attempts to confront the enemy have failed, including why their armed revolt in 1936 and earlier attempts also failed,
