First Responder Careers Expose Individuals to Higher Risks of Developing Trauma

Some careers include a higher likelihood of experiencing traumatic events that can lead to the development of PTSD Serving in the military is a high risk factor for developing PTSD However combat veterans develop PTSD at different rates depending on the severity and length of exposure to traumatic experiences There are also high incidences of reported sexual harassment and sexual abuse in the military As a result the rates of PTSD are relatively high compared to the overall prevalence in the general population Not only can law enforcement officers experience direct threats and stressful conditions but they also regularly witness the devastating effects of assaults robberies kidnappings and violent events However individuals in this profession have lower than expected rates of PTSD surprisingly An estimated 20 percent overall may result from having access to counseling and rigorous pre employment screenings EMTs and paramedics are routinely exposed to life threatening incidents and have more health problems than individuals in other occupations PTSD rates in this group are as high as 20 percent PTSD prevalence in this profession is comparable to law enforcement

Firefighters conduct paramedic activities and are the first responders to natural disasters

Firefighting is a dangerous profession that exposes workers to stressful conditions and traumatic events ranging from threats to their safety and experiencing the devastating effects of catastrophes As a result the prevalence of PTSD in this group can be as high as 20 percent Volunteer firefighters may have even higher rates because they don't have access to the same level of support as career firefighters

Healthcare workers especially those working in emergency rooms and intensive care units are also at higher risk

For example nurses working in critical care units are more likely to develop PTSD than nurses in other groups In addition while senior level nurses report fewer PTSD symptoms than junior ones they report higher rates of burnout Finally healthcare workers exposed to patients that have experienced violence such as an assault victim are more likely to develop PTSD than surgeons who treat assault victims

Rescue workers medical workers and volunteers who act as first responders during disasters witness the aftermath of horrific events and can even become involved in severe traumatic events

The prevalence of PTSD in these individuals has been estimated to be between 15 and 30 percent

Journalists who work as war correspondents are at higher risk of being injured killed or kidnapped

Their lifetime prevalence of PTSD which can be as high as 30 percent reflects their lack of access to support and PTSD treatment options

Transit and train operators are frequently exposed to physical threats and witness suicide incidents such as person under train events

Exposure to these traumatic and threatening circumstances can be a daily or weekly occurrence

Bus drivers are more prone to PTSD because they have more direct contact with the general public than train drivers locked in secure train cabs In these high risk professions the incidence of trauma declines when policies are in place to debrief victims give victims immediate access to counseling and screen for individuals at high risk of having adverse reactions to traumatic conditions Portable Genealogist Christopher Challender Child, New England Historic Genealogical Society, 2014 When it comes to studying your own DNA understanding your options and test results are crucial This Portable Genealogist will guide you through the process of selecting a DNA testing service understanding the results and making connections to the genealogical research you've already completed

Bit e by Bit e written by two eating disorder specialists at London's world famous Maudsley Hospital was a milestone in the treatment of bulimia. For the first time a self help book was shown by rigorous clinical trials to cure a significant fraction of women suffering from bulimia and to reduce the therapist contact time needed by others. Getting Better Bit e by Bit e offered an efficient way of treating bulimic patients which would be valued by any resource conscious health service. The authors of Getting Better Bit e by Bit e have now written this Clinician's Guide to help health care professionals maximize the benefit that patients obtain from the self help book. Based on the authors wide ranging experience of treating eating disorder patients it provides a step by step account of how the chapters in Getting Better Bit e by Bit e can be used to ameliorate various aspects of bulimic difficulties with examples drawn from real patients case histories. Particular emphasis is given to the problem of motivating patients who are reluctant to change their behaviour using Miller and Rollnick's motivational interviewing approach. The Clinician's Guide to Getting Better Bit e by Bit e will be invaluable for all those treating sufferers of bulimia.
